Indicted for Income Tax Fraud

William Bloff, organizer and leader of film industry unions, is shown in the office of his attorney in Los Angeles after his indictment by the federal grand jury on charges of income tax fraud. The government charged that in 1936 and 1937 Bloff reported incomes far below the actual sums. To add to Bloff's troubles, Gov. Henry Horner of Illinois signed a requisition for his extradition from California to finish serving a jail term imposed in 1922. Bloff was sentenced to six months for perjury, but served only a few days.
