

Recess Declared In Murder Case

Further Testimony of Dick Law Taken by Coroner in Slaying Quiz

ABERDEEN, Wash., Jan. 18.—(AP)—A meticulous inquest into the brutal slaying of Mrs. Laura Law was recessed late this afternoon until February 5, shortly after the slain woman's husband, Dick Law, CIO union official, testified he believed his wife was "the victim of forces that seek to destroy labor."

Deputy Prosecutor Paul O. Manley asked the 17-day recess "for the purpose of giving us time to develop additional evidence."

Law, international representative to the CIO from the International Woodworkers of America, was on the witness stand all day.

Highlight of his testimony came when he named ten men, some of them prominent in the Grays Harbor district, "who know something about the murder of my wife."

Mrs. Law was bludgeoned and stabbed in their home in Aberdeen last January 5.

Before a room crowded with intent spectators, Law testified concerning threats he said were made against his life.

Delivered a nine-minute eulogy to his wife, referring to her as a "rare" woman and a "splendid partner."

Reviewed his rise to an important union position. Recounted vividly how he rushed home from his union office to find his mother-in-law holding the body of his wife in her arms.

Denied he was a communist but admitted he had copies of the communist constitution and by-laws in his home.

Declared his relationship with Helen Soboleski of Seattle, clerical employe of the IWA, was both business and social but that it never got beyond the friendship stage.

As the fourth day of the inquest got under way this morning, Miss Soboleski, who had appeared as a witness, filed a $100,000 conspiracy to commit slander suit with the Grays Harbor county superior court clerk at Montesano.

The charge was against Prosecutor Stanley Krause and Deputy Prosecutor Manley and two previous witnesses, Mrs. Ruth Schell and Mrs. Anne Batchelor, both former friends of Miss Soboleski.

Six-Months' Job Leads to Forger

false pretenses also arose out of a "business" deal with a local man.

During the early summer of 1938, a warrant charging Borders with embezzlement was sworn out by a Salem publisher, though charges were afterwards dropped. The case involved several hundred dollars worth of advertising receipts allegedly withheld from their rightful owner. Borders was also connected with an insurance firm here some time ago.

In addition to the instruments on which indictments are already based, authorities have also in their possession five other checks attributed to him for sums ranging from $10 to $35, all of which are alleged to be fraudulent in one aspect or another.

Borders' prison record includes a seven-year sentence in the Iowa state reformatory for a statutory offense in 1931, and a later conviction for obtaining money under false pretenses at Adel, Ia. He was held briefly by authorities at Sheridan, Wyo., for illegal train riding following his departure from Salem, but information of his apprehension failed to reach here until after his release.

County 4H Clubs To Get 3000 Trees

CORVALLIS, Jan. 18.—(AP)—The mind may blow, but soon Marion county 4H club members won't care.

Three thousand young trees were obtained by W. D. Harding, county club leader, from the Oregon State college forest nursery for distribution to members for wind breaks, shelter belts and similar plantings.

Difficulty Chief Cause of Changes

city somewhat smaller than Salem. Its disadvantages are mostly obvious. It requires several hundred officers rather than one, although this difficulty is balanced by the fact that commissioners ordinarily receive salaries considerably smaller than a city manager.

Another fault that has developed in some cities is rivalry between commissioners, each anxious to make a good showing for his department; sometimes they have tussled for appropriations at each other's expense, to the detriment of the city budget as a whole and of efficient administration.

Since the salaries in a medium-sized city are necessarily small, it is not sensible to expect to attract thoroughly qualified and capable men.

Though these faults developed, the system succeeded in a majority of the cities where it was adopted; and the reason for its success apparently is not its fundamental efficiency as a system but rather the recognition which it implies, that running a city is a business and not a circus. When a city calls its governing body a commission rather than a council, immediately the citizens start looking for business men to man it.

However, the greater trend in recent years has been in the direction of the second plan known as the council-manager plan. The council is, once again, primarily a legislative body. Through the election of such a council, democracy is better preserved. The council is responsible to the voters and answerable to them if its policies displease, and is chosen on a basis of leadership and community confidence rather than for any specialized ability.

The council selects the city manager and turns over to him entire responsibility for running the various departments—except the justice department. The municipal judge is either separately appointed by the council or is elected by the people. Thus the city manager plan represents more closely than any other plan, the traditional American separation of executive, legislative and judicial functions.

As for the system—why, the city manager just runs the city as the council tells him to run it. It's as simple as that. But how it works is another story.

'Gone With Wind' Coming Here Soon

The motion picture version of "Gone With the Wind," outstanding novel of the South, has been booked for an early February showing at the Elsinore theatre. Manager Carl Porter announced last night. The initial Salem showing will be in substantially the form presented at the film play's world premier early this month at Atlanta, Ga.

The all-technicolor picture runs for the hours and 40 minutes. Manager Porter said there would be a brief intermission in each showing because of the play's length.
