

Holman Pleased By Budget Cuts

Balance Held of Greater Necessity Than More US Improvements

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—(AP)—Senator Holman (R-Ore) was generally pleased today with reductions proposed in the president's budget message and enlarged in some instances by congressional appropriations committees.

"I think possibly it is more important than making more extensive internal improvements, except to prevent unemployment of our citizens," Holman, a member of the joint committee, said, to balance the budget because no government in history ever survived bankruptcy. If we lose constitutional government we have lost everything."

Holman said he was convinced that by more efficient methods of administration "many worthwhile things can be done at a much less cost."

"Recently I investigated a large alum clearance project in a big eastern city," he continued. "I was told by the administrator two large appropriations had been made too fast with the result several million dollars had been spent on construction which best suited for the purpose intended."

Armstrong Great, Is Verdict Now

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—(AP)—Out of the first showing of the bigger and better Henry Armstrong came the conviction today, even for the die-hards among the ring critics and customers, that little perpetual motion definitely belongs among fistiana's greats.

Off his nine-round technical knockout over Pedro Montañes in the 15th successful defense of his world welterweight championship last night, the chief impression left with the faithful, of whom there were 19,157 in Madison Square Garden, was that this new, heavier and deadlier punching bazzaw had definitely proved his right to a niche in the fight game's hall of fame.

Stanford Loses Forward Star for USC Hoop Bills

PALO ALTO, Calif., Jan. 25.—(AP)—Stanford hopes of beating the University of Southern California in this weekend's crucial basketball series were dimmed today by the announcement that Forrest Anderson, forward, would not play. Anderson was unable to accompany the squad south tonight. He is suffering from a throat infection.

M·J·B WHY?

"I'm glad my grocer made that mistake..."

- We were having the Boss and his wife for dinner. I had planned the meal for days, but when the big evening finally arrived I found that like a nitwit, I'd forgotten to order coffee! (The Boss is a nut on coffee, too.) So I frantically called the store and asked them to send over a pound, quick.
- The delivery boy must have broken a leg because the coffee didn't arrive until we were sitting down to dinner. And that grocer had sent me M·J·B instead of the kind I ordered! I was furious, but what could I do? I opened the can and I must admit my first sniff of M·J·B was encouraging.
- I started the coffee and went back to the table, trying my best to be calm. Now I'm afraid I owe the M·J·B people an apology for ever having any doubts. That coffee was a triumph! The Boss had three cups and would have had a fourth if his wife hadn't stopped him. So I'm glad my grocer made that mistake. Otherwise I'd never have discovered M·J·B.
