CALENDAR NOTES

They call them Petroglyphs, this group of pictures hanging at the end of the main gallery, and they look better than they sound, because in common language they are just prehistoric Indian writing. It is not so often you see "copies" in the Art Center—at least in the student quarters—but these Petroglyphs are copies after their own hearts, say the instructors. The originals are painted on the walls of caves along the west coast—copied by California artists and reproduced by lithography—so it would be hard to display the originals. It is the first time they have ever been reproduced.

"And further," says the teaching staff, "if you think abstract painting is something new, just look at those things done nobody knows how many thousands of years ago." Anyway visitors will enjoy them as curiosities, if not anything else, although they are filled with charm and design and color.

Lithographs occupy the remainder of the main gallery. On the far end wall is hung a small group of portraits of famous men, including John Muir, Mark Twain, E. McDonald Wright and John Brown of Kansas fame. The remainder of the exhibition of prints by California artists is comprised of figure sketches, landscapes, pictures of deep sea life and a variety of refreshing themes.

The show of posters by Illinois artists which comes down next Thursday, will be the Art Center program "kicks" over KSLM next Tuesday when Edwin Thomas, manager of the job printing department of The Statesman, discusses "The Relationship of Art, Advertising and Printing." The hour is 2 p.m.

Miss Jane Robinson of the Art Center staff will talk to PEO group Monday night on the activities of the Art Center. Miss Robinson spoke Thursday night before the Junior Woman's club of Woodburn.

Miss Maxine Beckwith, Miss Carolyn Woods, Miss Barbara Pinney, Miss Eileen LaRaut, Miss Eva Shellito, Miss Margaret Rankin, Miss Marcia McClain, Miss Margaret Wright and Miss Esther Cammack.

Don't Look Now

but . . . I think we are awfully behind the times here. A little girl pictured in The Statesman yesterday wore cap and gown upon graduating from a Chicago kindergarten . . . Think how it would help business and what a lift it would be for the cap and gown manufacturers. Soon we'd be having the Kiddie-Widdle Kap 'n Gown Kompany.

A great big baby . . . arrived at the Russell Pratt home just the other day—a baby grand piano, all bundled up in burlap and blankets to keep it from having croup in its strings. Mrs. Pratt was surprised, because it was sent from Stockton, Calif., by her aunt-in-law, Mrs. J. A. Allen, but husband Russell had been notified beforehand about the gift.

Ol' stick-in-the-muds . . . If the Junior Woman's club is going to continue with Valentine dances they ought to wear rubber boots to their formal, because the mud is knee-deep out at Hazel Green and doesn't make good polka dots on beauteous gowns.

Hearts and flowers . . . Valentines went into a full-sized rural mailbox made of ivy and white carnations and labeled with "Boise" in bold gold letters, for Mrs. R. P. Boise, at her birthday party at the H. A. Cornoyer's on Friday afternoon. Luncheon tables were centered with old-fashioned glass hats holding nosegays of roses and violets, glass slippers held old-fashioned candy motto hearts and guests had an old-fashioned good time.

Battle of the sentences . . . Every time Dr. Bruce Baxter gives his talk on Horace Mann, Miss Harriet C. Long comes back with hers about great women. Now he's changing the title so she won't know how often he gives it. But Dr. Baxter, there's nothing to keep her from changing titles too. But Mann or Woman, we'll stick with Miss Long no matter how often she changes her address.

Carnolds of carnations . . . were used on the Cornelius-Breithaupt tea table last Sunday. Thirty-four dozen deep red and shell pink carnations went into the leis that formed the exquisite centerpiece. The red carnations combined in other parts of the house with pussy-willows and calla lilies. Even the bathroom boasted of a snowdrop or two, but I did miss a water lily. By the way, Helen Breithaupt will arrange you up one of those centerpieces for around $65 cash.

Just flying around . . . The Reynolds Allens, all four of them, returned from Florida by air this week.

Many talents . . . has 90-year-old Mrs. Sarah Whitney who celebrated her birthday on Friday, but perhaps her greatest accomplishment is writing letters, and she writes good ones, in a beautiful hand. She sends many dozens of letters each year—keeps in touch with old friends. That's a talent that's worth cultivating, and one that's dying out.

Notes at the concert . . . a man can be an actor and a musician after all—he roaches his hair up over his ears to be an actor and shakes it down to be a musician . . . someday that train is going to whistle when it shouldn't . . . hats off, said J. Lyman Steed . . . We left the reception early, was afraid Dalies Frantz might ask for my autograph.

Recollections . . . When a mother told about making red gumdrop kittens for a party the other day, I remembered the time when our parents made a wallpaper Valentine for every child in three of our schoolrooms . . . Maxine Buren.
