Cast Is Selected For Passion Play

Josephine Albert Spaulding to Sing; Music, Drama to Be Combined

The cast for the dramatic scenes of "There Is no Death," Easter music-drama which will be presented at the First Presbyterian church at 7:30 Easter Sunday night, has been selected.

The role of Judas will be portrayed by D. deLancy, formerly of the Pasadena playhouse, and a member of the National Collegiate players. The part of Joseph will be played by Everett Andrews, who is also coaching the players. Donald Ewing, president of the Willamette Little Theatre, will be the high priest, and Ralph May, prominent in forensic and speech activities at Willamette, will be Pilate. Others include Frances Kells, Mary Moses and Bill Harrington.

The entire Passion play will not e presented, but the scenes which will be enacted are based on the script used at Oberammergau. Special scenic and lighting effects will be employed.

"There Is no Death" was arranged by George Lee Marks, and In addition to the Passion play scenes, consists of special music by the choir, the crucifixion in pantomime, under the supervision of Fred Smith, the unveiling of an oil painting of Christ at Gethemane, painted especially for the Presbyterian church, with all these forms unified through narration, which will be in the hands of Herbert M. Johnston, radio announcer of KSLM.

Special soloists will be heard in the musical portion of the presentation, the first of those to be engaged being Josephine Albert Spaulding, mezzo-soprano, of Dal-
