 in rapidly. They tell this story: General Franco had planned an elaborate parade and invited all ambassadors to appear at the reviewing stand one hour ahead of time—that is all except the German. He was to walk in just before the parade started and get the applause.
 The octogenarian French ambassador, Marshal Petain, saw no reason why he should get there so early. Disregarding instructions he appeared about ten minutes before the parade started. The Franco claquees seeing only that he was an ambassador, and thinking he was the one they were supposed to applaud, set up a great demonstration. It was still on when the German arrived almost unnoticed.

Capitol Debt Due To Be Wiped out

All obligations incurred in the construction of Oregon's new capitol building will be wiped out within the next few days, following receipt of a check of $41,764.67 from the public works administration.

This was announced at a meeting of the state board of control yesterday. The structure cost approximately $2,500,000, of which $1,116,335.21 or 45 per cent was contributed by the public works administration. The remaining $1,375,000 was a state appropriation. After paying all obligations approximately $153 will remain in the capitol building funds. The board authorized installation of a water heating unit in the state central heating plant. It was estimated that this would save the state approximately $35 a month.
