Board Plans new Concert Series

The executive committee of the Salem Community concert association met on Thursday for a discussion of this year's ticket selling campaign. The committee is planning to increase the number of students, alumni and friends who occupied much of the meeting time.

In previous years the student ticket price has been set at a minimum because it was necessary to fill up seats in the auditorium, but this year the expected increase in sale of season tickets will create a seating problem. The group agreed to raise the student price to half the adult ticket cost, a system which has been used in all other communities using the community series.

The advance in student tickets, with the added number of adult tickets expected to be sold, the committee stated, would make it possible to bring higher priced artists in next year's series.

The community concert series works differently than most other concert courses. Tickets are sold in advance, during a one-week campaign. The committee then determines what artists are available for the amount of money which was raised. This year's series included Marjorie Edwards, violinist, Dailies Franz, pianist, the Joos ballet and Igo Gordin, who will appear in baritone concert on April 17.

This year's campaign will begin April 22 and be concluded in a week. Headquarters are in the Senator hotel lobby. The plan of giving a free ticket to anyone selling five adult tickets, has proved a successful spur to ticket sales and will be continued this year according to J. Lyman Steed, the association's president.

Mrs. George R. K. Moorhead, campaign manager, will take information calls at 9285.

Meetings will be held to observe the founding of the sorority and to promote fraternity education and friendship. Alpha Gamma Delta was founded in 1904 at Syracuse university, and was one of the first groups to establish and maintain a philanthropic project on a nation-wide scale.

Don't Look Now..

but... the Philharmonic benefit, as usual, proves a second Easter parade, with all Salem turning out in new spring bonnets and suits. As to the committee: there was tall Mrs. Ronald Jones in a red hat and navy sheer suit, short Mrs. Karl Beck in black suit and hat, pink collar and veil, medium-sized Mrs. Glenn Seesley in rose ensemble. Mrs. William Lytle wore black shot with gold, Miss Frances Melton was in all black. Mrs. Kenneth Bell in black and white. About then we became confused, by all the pretty ladies.

Primrose path... Barring too heavy rains, Mrs. Chester Cox's hundreds of primrose plants will be in their best bloom today. Mrs. Cox is inviting those who like primroses to see them today at 262 West Lincoln. "Come into the back yard, the few out in front can't compare to the others," she says.

Family party... Mrs. Frank Durbin returned this week from a visit with daughter Mrs. Frank Chapman and family, who moved recently to San Jose. Although the Chapmans found it hard to leave Salem, they are making many friends in the south and like it, reports Mrs. Durbin.

Pioneer coffee grinder... Nora Anderson threatens to find a neat street corner and grind coffee in an old-fashioned mill, sell it for a nickel a cup to bewhiskered Salem men as a centennial benefit. Incidentally it's reported that husband William Everett Anderson is growing a lovely blonde whisker arrangement in order to use the family mustache cup.

Nicest thing... Betty Hamilton's Salem friends heard about her engagement to Jim Wilkinson by way of nice personal notes delivered by the mailman the same day as her announcement party was revealed in The Statesman. The party was given at the Chi Omega house in Eugene and the family heard about it on the previous Sunday at dinner.

Centerpiece of the week... was a striking arrangement of yellow calla lilies and snapdragons, red amaryllis and white begonia leaves. The table was covered with a chartrouse damask cloth and you can imagine the furor it caused at the benefit bridge tea given for the Philharmonic orchestra at the Marion on Friday.

And a lady to match... Perhaps it was only a coincidence, but Mrs. Wallace Wharton looked mighty nice pouring coffee and sitting at the chartrouse table, dressed in an olive green dress and hat trimmed in a large chartrouse leather. The only thing lacking was a chartrouse hot dish holder to protect her hand while "dispensing hospitalities."

Little adventures... On the way home, when the car radio boomed out with martial music, followed by a calliope number, we slowed down to cruising speed and made believe we were in a parade... Unusual, but interesting, we saw a lady, driving down the street with one hand and talking the sign language with the other. It would take a rear vision mirror for the back-seat driver to make herself heard... Going past a blacksmith shop that sports a busy radio, there poured forth "I Cry for Youoo." Nice feeling, when somebody wants you!

Modern improvements... After seeing one of those electric driven lawn mowers in the hardware store, Dad is going to get one and hitch a little trailer on, so he and Mother can go places while doing the yard work... Maxine Buren.

Pianist Will Play Here Tuesday

This year seems to be one for centennial anniversaries. Not only is Salem celebrating its one hundredth birthday, but major symphony orchestras throughout the world are honoring the birth, one hundred years ago, of Peter Ilitch Tschaiakowsky, one of the greatest composers of our time.

The Salem Philharmonic orchestra, in its third concert of the current season on Tuesday night, will devote the last half of the program to Tschaiakowsky's music.

George Hopkins, distinguished pianist, composer and teacher at the University of Oregon, is featured solo artist, playing for the first performance in Salem the Beethoven "Emperor" Concerto for piano and orchestra. Mr. Hopkins is a pianist of many attainments. He began music studies when 5 years old and during his early studies was directed by Alfred Butler, a prominent pianist and teacher of Los Angeles. He filled his first professional engagement at the age of 13.

Mr. Hopkins studied music with Harold Handolph, director of the Peabody conservatory, and theory with Gustav Strube, conductor of the Baltimore symphony orchestra. After winning a fellowship at Julliard foundation in New York his piano studies were with Ernest Hutcheson. He studied composition here and wrote "Themes and Variations" for string quartet and other works for which he is becoming well known as a composer.

The Beethoven "Emperor" Concerto, which Mr. Hopkins will play with the orchestra, is without doubt the most original, imaginative, and difficult of all concertos. It is not only a display piece for the soloist but the orchestra has its just share in the music, with parts which might have been taken from a symphony with their magnificent grandeur. The beautiful "Adagio" or second movement is one of exceeding loveliness, and in the final "Rondo" Beethoven unfolds the full splendor of the piano, which demands the utmost in artistry from the soloist.

The program for the concert is: Symphony No. 5 in A minor—Mendelssohn—Adagio—Allegro—Concerto No. 5 in E flat major (Emperor)—Mr. Hopkins, pianist—Excerpts from "The Nutcracker"—Tschaiakowsky—Overture—Salernelle—Tschaiakowsky.

The program for the concert is: Symphony No. 5 in A minor—Mendelssohn—Adagio—Allegro—Concerto No. 5 in E flat major (Emperor)—Mr. Hopkins, pianist—Excerpts from "The Nutcracker"—Tschaiakowsky—Overture—Salernelle—Tschaiakowsky.
