He also refused to divulge names of fellow-campaigners with the remark that "the arm of the Jew is long and vindictive," evidently referring to fancied persecution of his partisans should they make themselves known.

Political observers were quick to note, soon after the announcement of Brown's candidacy, that in many ways it forms a strong contrast to those of his father. Sam Brown, in years past.

The elder Brown, known for the frankness of his statements as well as the fairness of his campaigns, never stooped to the brand of race prejudice now purveyed by his son. Court Urged to Improve Evergreen, Park and Childs Avenues

Dr. O. A. Clson and Floyd Bressler headed a delegation of Market street and Garden road residents living immediately outside of the city limits before the county court yesterday which asked action by the court in improving and widening their highway from the city limits to the four corners or at least through the heavily settled district along Evergreen,

Park and Childs avenues. The delegation recalled residents of the vicinity had cointed out to the court last winter the fact that the road is narrow, lacks a non-skid surface, and is not provided with walks to accommodate heavy pedestrian traf-

Court members indicated that they had given thought to the problem since the appearance of the delegation last winter, and that they had virtually decided to non-skid the surface of the road even though construction of sidewalks is probably impossible at present. Mention was also made of the possibility of widening the highway by building two-foot rock shoulders on each side of the right of way, but no commitments were made by the court.

Residents of Park street, close to the area under consideration. also petitioned the court for oiling their street, which extends seventenths of a mile and serves 32 houses. The petition was signed by 67 residents, who stated that last year they had paid for oiling
