ed a bill providing $1,820,943,000 for the army, including $545,770,364 of the extraordinary $1,122,000,000 program requested by the chief executive.

The measure contained a total of $265,886,418 in cash for the air corps, plus authority to enter into $103,300,000 of contracts for the corps. The bill stipulates that not less than $123,741,994 shall be used to acquire new planes and equipment for them.

Measure May Be up For Debate Today

Administration leaders arranged to call up the measure for debate in the senate tomorrow, with the expectation that it would go speedily to the house and probably be ready for Mr. Roosevelt's signature by the end of the week.

The house military committee and an appropriations subcommittee worked on the program also. Before the former, Maj. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, chief of the army air corps, announced plans for establishing four new pilot training centers, with a capacity for 1200 students each annually. And, speaking of aircraft types, he said "The power of the bomber is what we need most."

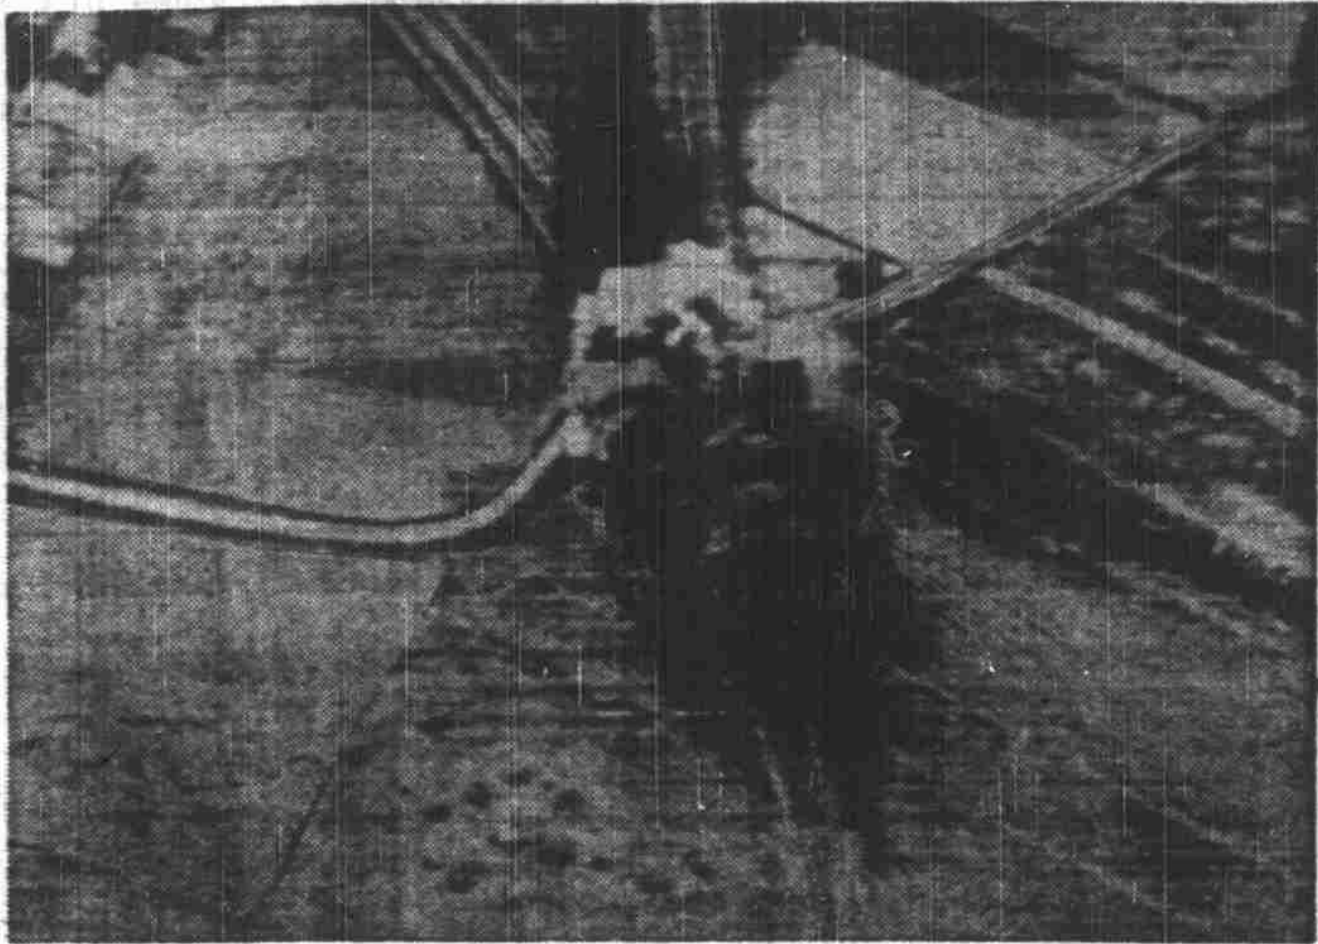

Elsewhere, the town was abuzz with developments related to the defense program:

(1) A White House secretary said he had no knowledge concerning reports that President Roosevelt would form a "coalition cabinet" including several republicans, because of national concern over the war and the defense situation.

(2) Some republicans in congress supported the statement of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh deploring "material" in connection with the defense program, while Mrs. Roosevelt called Lindbergh's reference to "powerful elements" desiring to push America into the war "unfortunate."

(3) Senator Vandenberg of Michigan, republican presidential candidate, suggested in the senate the establishment of a "civilian munitions administration" to organize the mass production industrial activities involved in the defense plans.

Cake May Follow In Williams Post

1936 and 1940 Delegates Will Vote Thursday on Successor

PORTLAND, May 20.—(P)—A move to name Ralph Cake of Portland, republican national committeeman-elect, successor to Ralph Williams, will be made Thursday at a meeting of 1936 convention delegates and delegates-elect.

Williams, veteran committeeman from Oregon, died last week at Philadelphia.

The meeting was called by Chairman Walter L. Toole, who said 1936 and 1940 delegates will vote on Williams' successor. Korn Crandall, republican state chairman, will take a mail vote on the state central committee.

Toole predicted that Cake would be elected and said: "It is absolutely imperative that we have a national committeeman at Philadelphia within the next week."

Justice McReynolds dissented on the ground "that the act under review is beyond any power granted to congress" but did not write a separate opinion.

In another major decision, the court warned against any "consolidation of religion" and ruled unconstitutional a Connecticut statute requiring anyone desiring to solicit money or other valuables for a religious or philanthropic cause to take out a permit.

Jesse Cantwell, New Haven resident, had been convicted of a breach of the peace after he was alleged to have played, before Catholics on the public street, a phonograph record attacking the Catholic religion. Today's unanimous opinion, written by Justice Roberts, said that there had been no assault or other disturbance, "but only an effort to persuade a willing listener to buy a book or to contribute money in the interest of what Cantwell, however misguided others may think him, conceived to be true religion."

Gillespie to Get Parole on June 1

Ray Gillespie, 31, serving a three-year penitentiary term in connection with a riot at the Crown Willamette camp near Seaside in March, 1936, will be released June 1, when he completes a third of his sentence, state parole board officials announced Monday.

Gillespie, one of 30 men involved in a fight between two unions, was sentenced April 27, 1936, but received a bench parole. He afterward was arrested for an altercation in a restaurant with the result that the parole was revoked.

Counter-Drive Weygand Plan

"Sewing up Pocket" Said to Be Strategy; Nazi Objective Shifted the shifting thrust to the west—away from the road to Paris—gains between 20 and 30 miles on a line north from St. Quentin, which was in German hands.

If successful, the new drive to the channel would imperil 300,000 British soldiers on the allies' north flank. It would also gain new cases for a lethal attack on England, just 20 miles across the channel from Calais, France.

Sixty thousand German mechanized troops, comprising five full divisions, were engaged in the battering march across the plains of northern France.

The main objective, it appeared, was to drive a wedge between the French forces defending Paris and the allied armies (British, Belgian and French) in Belgium.

Allied troops in the north immediately dropped back to meet the new threat on the channel, ready for a back-to-the-sea stand against the menace of a head invasion of England. (Prime Minister Winston Churchill has already warned that England's "own day" of defending her soil is imminent.)

The lightning shift in German tactics, reportedly dictated by Reichsfuehrer Hitler himself in his headquarters "somewhere on the western front," followed reports that Gen. Maxime Weygand, 73-year-old new commander in chief of the allies, was massing a huge army to "pinch off" the 50-mile deep nail salient into France on the Meuse river front.

Manufacturers' Head Says Reasonable Umpiring by Government Okeh

PORTLAND, May 20.—(P)—Private industry wants "a reasonable amount of umpiring by the government" but it does not want the government to send private enterprises to the sidelines, H. W. Prentiss said today.

The president of the National Association of Manufacturers told an interviewer "the time has come for a great mobilization of private industry in America." He explained that "by private enterprise we do not mean unrestricted activity."

America's freedom, he said, rests on a tripod—representative democracy, civil and religious liberty and free private enterprise. "Undermine either of these and our freedom is imperiled. The moment government begins to plan the economic affairs of a nation, the government must mold public opinion through the newspapers, the radio, motion pictures, the schools and churches.

"Whenever the rights of these agencies are endangered, there rises a strong agency in its defense. Free private enterprise is being threatened today, and it is our organization, the National Association of Manufacturers, which has undertaken the defense."
