

Rivera Mentioned In Trotsky Affair

Missing Secretary Seen at Home of Artist, Police Declare

MEXICO CITY, May 30 - (AP) - The chief of Mexico's secret police said tonight he had apparently reliable information that Sheldon Harte, missing secretary to Leon Trotsky, was seen entering the home of Diego Rivera, noted artist, a half hour after the machine-gunning of Trotsky's residence last week.

The police chief, Col. Leandro Sanchez Salazar, declared he had obtained testimony that Harte rode to the Rivera residence in a station wagon belonging to the artist.

The station wagon was seized by police yesterday when they took into custody Rodriguez Ortega, a chauffeur employed by Rivera. Ortega has been questioned for many hours.

Injunction Obtained

Col. Salazar said his informants told him Ortega and Harte were riding together when the station wagon drove into the Rivera grounds.

Rivera obtained a temporary injunction yesterday restraining police from arresting him. He said he had been informed his arrest had been ordered.

The artist in a formal statement declared the police raid on his home and grounds was "an outrage" and a violation of all legal provisions.

Rivera and Trotsky once were close friends. During the first days the Russian exile spent in Mexico he was Rivera's guest. Then they quarreled.

Friends of Rivera said they believed there was no connection between the Trotsky incident and the break with Rivera.

Intervention now Is Plea of Yates

NEW YORK, May 30 - (AP) - Rear Admiral Yates Stirling, retired, today declared that the United States "spiritually is now at war" and asked, "why not actively?"

Speaking at a Memorial day service, the former commander of the Brooklyn navy yard asserted that "America must choose and choose quickly, for no time can be lost. The monster is at our gates."

Another speaker - Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, in an address at Ferncliff cemetery in nearby Ardsley, N.Y., maintained that "we must not be ridden by our fears" and urged her listeners to discard hysteria, fear and hatred.

She said the United States faced the double challenge of realizing it was a part of a disordered world and of adjusting its beliefs carefully.

"We must keep our nation still firm in the way we have believed was the democratic way of life," she continued. "None of us knows from day to day what may happen."

Everson Hopeful Of Brighter Day

PORTLAND, May 30 - (AP) - A prayer that Europe's battlefield horrors might represent the "dark hour before the dawn of a new day" was offered here today by a clergyman and educator.

The Rev. William G. Everson, president of Linfield college, said at Memorial day services: "The armistice must come one of these days. If England and France win, who will temper the terms with justice and brotherhood? If Germany wins, who will eliminate the hatreds and speak of the golden rule?"

"We must think serious thoughts, speak carefully, walk humbly . . ."

"We are not give up our confidence in man, our conviction that right must win, our faith in an almighty God."

Hillman May Seek To End Labor War

WASHINGTON, May 30 - (AP) - Men of both the AFL and CIO said they would not be surprised if Sidney Hillman, named by President Roosevelt to coordinate the labor effort in the defense program, would launch a move to end the rift between the rival labor organizations when the CIO national executive board meets here Monday.

Hillman, vice president of the CIO, was one of the seven national defense commissioners appointed yesterday.

Harry C. Bates, chairman of the AFL peace committee, said that although he had received no definite indication that a new peace effort was imminent, he believed that a settlement should be made to avoid any friction which might endanger the defense program.

He suggested both sides might yield some ground to obtain a lasting agreement.

Surface relations between Hillman and CIO President John L. Lewis have been cordial, but it is known that inside the CIO councils they have differed sharply on major policy matters.

Claims of 'Fifth Column' Defended

NEW YORK, May 31 - (Friday) - A spokesman for the New York Daily News said today that its editorial reported "fifth column" activity in Mexico by its special writer Hal Burton was "so well documented they speak for themselves."

Other than this the paper had no comment on action by the Mexican secretary of interior summoning Burton for questioning in connection with the article.

The New York Times said it had no comment regarding a similar summons for Arnaldo Cortes, its Mexico City correspondent.

In Carbondale, Ill., Mrs. Julia Amon recalled that two Civil War veterans conducted a memorial service at the graves of their comrades 74 years ago, and that this led Gen. John A. Logan to issue later an order proclaiming May 30 as the annual day of observance.

In London Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy and other Americans attended services for the soldiers of the United States buried in British cemeteries.

After placing a wreath at the tomb of England's unknown soldier, the ambassador was told by the subdean of Westminster abbey:

"We know your prayers are with this nation, and that you stand for the same things we do."

The divisions of the parade turned eyes right at the reviewing stand in front of the Capitol theatre where Governor Charles A. Sprague, Mayor W. W. Chadwick, Colonel Elmer V. Wooton, Herman Laffy, president of the Federated Patriotic Orders, Major B. F. Pound, Grand Chief de Gare, 48 et 5, and Chief of Police Frank A. Minto took the salute.

The parade swung around the courthouse block and massed on High street before the World War memorial monument for patriotic rites there.

Karl Steiwer was grand marshal for the parade. Other officers in his party were Lieutenant John H. Bagley, chief of staff and Lieutenant H. B. Allen, adjutant. Colonel G. M. Erwin commanded national guard units participating, including Company B, 162d Infantry; headquarters battery, 249th coast artillery, and medical detachment, 249th coast artillery.

The crowd that gathered at the War Mothers monument on the courthouse grounds following the parade was one of the largest in recent years.

Americans, Governor Charles A. Sprague told the audience, have a "duty to carry the load of the government of this country no matter what emergency there may be."

"If we are to honor those who built and protected this government," the governor charged, "we can honor them best by preserving it."

The United States has held and should continue to hold "wonder and allurements" for its citizens, in business and political life, in education and in social and fraternal life, declared Dr. J. C. Harrison, pastor of the First Methodist church and speaker of the day. That allurements, he said, lies in the opportunity held out to every man.

The story of American life from the beginning has been that what has been impossible for people in other lands has been accomplished by people in America," Dr. Harrison explained. "The reason is the liberties that we have. American institutions represent an evolution of the principles of the liberty of a free people."

Dr. Harrison drew applause when he declared in closing that, contemplating the upheaval abroad, "we must defend ourselves so that no fifth column can upset us."

Other speakers were Mayor W. W. Chadwick, who expressed pleasure at the size of the crowd participating in the memorial rites; Verlie Duke, Stayton girl, who recited Lincoln's Gettysburg address; William Shinn, Salem high school student, who read General Logan's orders, and Herman Laffy, president of the Federation of Patriotic Orders.

War Shadow Seen On Memorial Day

ham Lincoln made his famed address, Governor Arthur H. James of Pennsylvania declared: "Peace can be attained, if at all, first by preparing to defend ourselves; second, by tending to our own business and tending to it properly; and third, by setting as our goal the vision of an America of the future which can be a rock of liberty in a sea of anarchy and dissolution."

The nation could end at once its long struggle against depression, the governor said, by spurring industry for national defense.

In many other services there were counterparts of these messages.

President Roosevelt, himself busy with the greatest peace-time armament program in the history of the United States, sent Major Horace B. Smith, a military aide, to Arlington, to lay a wreath of spring flowers on the tomb of the unknown soldier.

There was a Memorial day parade in the capital, and in it was 93-year-old Col. John M. Kline,
