of 749,669 square feet in the affected area.

Remonstrances are not legally binding on the council.

A chain grocery store will be built on the property.

Application of the Economy Cab company for licensing of a fleet of ten cent taxicabs was rejected by a vote of 10 to 4.

Davidson's Motor Upsets Machinery

The record vote came after Alderman Arthur O. Davison dropped a wrench into the council's caucus system by moving that the license be granted after it had been "decided" in caucus preceding the council session that the license would be rejected.

Alderman Frank Marshall expressed the surprise of the aldermen at the move.

"I'm surprised," he said, "at this motion after the caucus made its decision. Of course, it's not legally binding, but it was a gentleman's agreement. . . . The purpose of holding a caucus is to keep from getting on the spot when you get out on this floor. If we're going to do it like this, I'm not going to say the caucus."

An attack on public utility companies in general and the Oregon Motor Stages, which had threatened to withdraw its city bus line service if the taxicab license was granted, in particular was made by Alderman David O'Hara, who nevertheless voted against granting of the license.

Utilities Dominate, O'Hara Contends

"This city is dominated by public utility companies more than any other city in the state," O'Hara said. "It is the first time this bus company has come up here and told us what we've got to do."

O'Hara also launched into the Portland General Electric company, charging that the power company is making an effort to complete a survey of its properties in Salem which it promised the council over a year ago.

An ordinance which would give the council authority to give permission for building of stairs in sidewalks, outgrowth of a request by builders of the Murphy building for special permission to build a sidewalk stairs, was introduced and went through two readings, but failed to draw a suspension of rules for third reading and final vote.

Builders of the new structure represented to the council at its last meeting that their architect had misunderstood building regulations and had provided a sidewalk stairway, prohibited by ordinance.

When suspension of the rules was called on the bill last night, Alderman M. R. Lobdell, voting against it, said, "Is it so that when someone makes a blunder in building they can come to the council to have it corrected?"

A requested zone change at Capitol and Nebraska streets was indefinitely postponed when it was established that withdrawals from the requesting petition reduced signatories to below the required percentage of property owners.

Change of the block formerly occupied by the Yew Park school from a class 2 residential to a class 3 business zone was approved.

A resolution was adopted ordering paving of the south half of Mill street between High and Liberty streets.

Law Slaying Is Again Probed

Private Investigation Is Claimed in Testimony Given at Inquest

ABERDEEN, Wash., June 3—(AP)—After lying dormant four months, an inquest into the mysterious slaying of Laura Law, wife of a CIO union official who was strangled and stabbed to death here January 5, was resumed today with these developments:

1—Testimony that a private investigation into the enigmatic killing is being conducted and that an ice pick that "might have been" that possibly was the weapon used to kill Mrs. Law had been located.

2—A declaration by Deputy Prosecutor Paul Manley to the coroner's jury that "we haven't anything to disclose at this time that would help you in reaching a verdict."

3—A revelation by Manley that Gray harbor authorities are investigating "a trusty who was released from jail here the night Mrs. Law was killed."

Two Attorneys Ejected

4—Ejection of two attorneys, engaged by civil rights and labor groups to assist Dick Law, the slain woman's husband, from the inquest after they insisted upon work a number of hours search was necessary to find the model.

5—Statements by the Gray harbor civil rights committee and the two ejected attorneys that the inquest is a "sham" and that they intend to revitalize their attempts to find the woman's slayer or slayers.

The inquest, begun last January shortly after Mrs. Law's death, was resumed this morning after a four-month interim.

Declaring at the outset that Law, counsel—Irvin Goodman, CIO lawyer from Portland, and John Caughlan, former King county deputy prosecutor—would not be allowed to cross question witnesses, Dr. Stevenson began questioning men that Law, during his inquest after they insisted upon work a number of hours search was necessary to find the model.
