In Havana, Cuba, at the second conference of American foreign ministers, Secretary Hull proposed joint trusteeship by the 21 American republics over any European colonies in the western hemisphere which might be threatened with transfer to any other European power.
On that point, the German radio said the forthcoming South American trip of Camille Chauvin, former vice premier of the French government, would be to look after France's possessions in the Western Hemisphere.
The Berlin wireless attributed to Vichy, France, diplomatic quarters a statement that the French government is worried about the "tendencies of the United States aiming at systematically restricting or even definitely eliminating . . . European possessions in America."
German Supply Ship Reported Bombed
Meanwhile, the British and German military machines each prepared for the expected Nazi invasion attempt. Aerial warfare followed its usual course.
The air ministry in London announced that a 14,000-ton enemy supply ship was successfully bombed by the British off the Danish coast Sunday and that military objectives in Germany and Holland were bombed Sunday night.
The Germans said their latest raids on Britain* caused destruction fires and explosions at airfields, seaports and oil storage tanks. They said a tanker and four merchant vessels went down in the English channel.
Some French airmen still are fighting Germany, the headquarters of General Charles DeGaulle in London said. Followers of the commander of the free French legion working with the British took part in the British raids on Germany Sunday night, it was said.
The British admiralty acknowledged the loss of the 1360-ton destroyer Brazen. She was the third British naval vessel acknowledged lost over the weekend.
The British mined the southern entrance to the Irish sea to keep invaders from Ireland's eastern shore. In northern Ireland, thousands of British troops are waiting for any German thrust on Luster or on neutral Eire to the south.

Secretary of State Earl Snell and State Treasurer Walter E. Pearson also spoke words of welcome, the latter recalling his own former residence in the "deep south." Other greetings were voiced by Mayor W. W. Chadwick, who described the Centennial plans in explaining the prevalence of whiskers and pioneer garb, and J. D. Mickle, head of the state agricultural department.
Don Black, president of the junior chamber of commerce, presided and called upon each person present to introduce himself or herself.
While the visitors were seeing Salem, several hundred Salem residents were trooping through the tour's exhibit car at the Southern Pacific station. Cotton and cotton by-products, lumber and its wall-board and naval stores products, nuts, wild life of land and river and health program displays attracted especial attention.
The Mississippians' 14-car special train left shortly after 9 o'clock for Olympia, Wash. It will go from Olympia to Grand Coulee Dam, Spokane, through the northern states to Minneapolis and then back to Mississippi.

side of the Atlantic and pledged United States cooperation "should the occasion arise, in its execution."
Hull conceded that such a trusteeship should be free of any idea of "special interests by any American republic" and that "as soon as conditions permit, the region should be restored to its original sovereign or be declared independent when able to establish and maintain stable self-government."
His words, gravely spoken, gave further emphasis to an already formally presented note warning Germany and Italy the United States would resist, alone if necessary, any attempt to lay hands on French, British or Netherlands colonies in the new world.
Hull spoke at an open afternoon session in a grand marble capital following a closed morning session at which commissions were set up to deal with vital problems of hemisphere defense and economy.
Continental Defense Study Is Launched
At the morning session the United States took a place on the important peace commission which is to canvass the whole question of continental defense.
Describing the war's dislocation of normal trade and the growth of opposite trading methods, Hull reaffirmed his faith in liberal trade principles and urged the republics to develop these.
But he recognized the need for a transition to methods themselves bordering on barter and restrictive systems to bulwark the hemisphere's economy against regimented devices.
Disposition of stagnant surpluses piling up in all American countries as a result of the loss of European markets was described as the most pressing problem.
The delegates greeted warmly President Roosevelt's recommendation to congress for aid in disposition of Latin American surplus commodities through the export-import bank.
Dr. Leo S. Rowe, director-general of the Pan American union, described as "good news which comes at the right psychological moment" Mr. Roosevelt's action in seeking a half-billion dollar increase in the bank's lending capacity for this purpose.
Ambassador Jose Santiago Rodriguez, the Venezuelan delegate, said the president's action was "a magnificent gesture."
The Bolivian, Chilean and Argentine delegates likewise expressed approval of the presidential action.
Argentina Spokesman Makes Reservations
Speaking for Argentina, Leopoldo Melo said that Argentina identified herself with the future destiny of America but warned the delegates that they must not "pretend to dictate formulas" for conduct entirely predicated on the future.
He said such a course would be in vain because of rapid changes which might bring about a situation in which the nations of America would find themselves proceeding on a "conjectural hypothesis."
Melo told the delegates they should remember the custom of this hemisphere always has been to treat "all nations of the world" with equality.

Trip Down Hell's Canyon Is Tried

LEWISTON, Ida., July 22—(AP)—A party of six put two boats into the Snake river at the Red Lodge mine near Homestead, Ore., this morning to attempt the run through Hell's canyon, deepest on the North American continent.
The expedition's two boats, the Snake Chatter and Hell's Bells, carry Kyle McGrady, Clarkston, Wash., who operates a mail launch from Lewiston to the lower end of the gorge; Lawrence and John Olney, Dig Bar, Ore.; also experienced rivermen; Paul Laiden of Oak Grove, Ore., and Paul Jones and Clarence Moore, Lewiston newspaper reporters.
Military headquarters predicted that the bill providing for indefinite training of national guardsmen would be approved by congress not later than next week and that a actual mobilization would be ordered prior to August 4.
General White's recent statement called attention to the lack of cooperation on the part of many employers following the World war.

Letters Show Employers to Cooperate in Continued Employment of Guardsmen

Oregon employers have taken kindly to the urging of Major General George A. White that national guardsmen, if called into training by congressional action, be restored to their present jobs on their return, according to a large number of letters received at military headquarters here.
General White recently issued a statement stressing the importance of the proposed defense training for national guardsmen and asked their employers to cooperate.
"We are more than gratified with the attitude of the employers," Brigadier General Thomas E. Rilea declared yesterday. "Letters received from these employers indicate that all guardsmen called into service will hold their jobs regardless of the length of the training period."

GOP Nominee's Sincerity Evident, Local Delegate Says on Return Home

Further testimony to the effect that the recent republican national convention was "unbossed" and an example of "unusual independence of action on the part of the delegates" was given by Salem Sunday night with the return of Frederick S. Lampport, vice-chairman of the Oregon delegation.
Mr. and Mrs. Lampport toured through eastern Canada, the northern states, visited the democratic convention at Chicago for one day and stopped at Glacier national park en route home by automobile.
The republican nominee for president, Wendell Willkie, will convince the people as effectively as he did the republican convention that he is the best man for president, Lampport declared. He described the nominee as "a reasonable, evangelical sort of fellow who sells himself by his evident sincerity and frankness to everyone he meets."
Convention enthusiasm was as great for Senator McNary for vice-president as it was for Willkie, Lampport observed.

Flaxarians Pleased at Part in Production, Men's Club Is Told

MT. ANGEL—President A. W. Holmes informed the Business Men's club at luncheon in the Mt. Angel hotel Monday night that Salem was generously giving Mt. Angel a special Centennial pageant and that ten Flaxarians would have to be present each of the four nights the show is presented.
He asked the cooperation of the club in the matter, saying it not only is a signal honor for Mt. Angel to be the only small town thus invited and excellent publicity for the Flax festival, which is to be held the week following the Salem Centennial.
The local bit is to be incorporated as part of the flax theme, Holmes himself will take charge and will be assisted by Tony Bigler.
In the absence of T. B. Endres, general chairman of the Flax festival, Ed Stolle reported that plans for the celebration are going along well with the candidates' ball next Thursday the first official event on the list.
Dr. E. J. Corcoran gave a detailed report on the meeting of the "Americans Incorporated," an organization designed to detect subversive movements. Dr. Corcoran represented the Business Men's club and the local American legion. He presented a proclamation to the club endorsing strict vigilance in combating fifth column work.
President Holmes gave his approval to the matter but asked that members use "good common sense" and report no one because of ill will or other unworthy motives and investigate fully before reporting, so that no one be unjustly accused.

I used to be rabid on the subject of Sunday driving. My wife used to almost blast to get me in the Hispano-Plymouth and out onto the highway. But no more! I've found a trick!
It's this—start out on the main highway and turn at the first unfamiliar road you come to. Then drive along it till you come to another unfamiliar road and try that one!
You may wind up in someone's west forty, or in the driveway of a ranch house. But what do you care? The kick is in never knowing what's coming next!
You'll be surprised to find what adventure you'll have. I've found whole sections of country that I never dreamed existed. I've found blossoms, deserted houses, and once, even a ghost school house with an arithmetic lesson still un-erased on the molding board.
What I'm getting at is—just jump in the car and let 'er find her own way. Pretend you can't read the road signs.
