Law on Secret Orders Conned

Societies Need not Meet at School to Come Under Ban, Ruled

Oregon school boards are required by law to suspend and expel public school pupils who engage in organization or maintenance of secret societies "whether such activities are conducted at school or after school hours, at home, or elsewhere," Attorney General I. H. Van Winkle ruled yesterday in answer to questions presented by Rex Putnam, state superintendent of public instruction.

School directors, however, "can not be held responsible for the suppression of such societies where they meet entirely out of school hours, out of school premises, except to the extent of suspending or expelling students who engage in the organization or maintenance thereof," the attorney general further ruled.

The law forbidding public school secret societies, the opinion continued, allows to school boards some discretion in deciding whether or not pupils' membership in such societies is detrimental.

The law was not intended by the legislature to forbid high school pupils belonging to fraternal organizations whose membership is made up in large part of public school students, Van Winkle's opinion concluded.

Italy Loses 'Blitzkrieg' Against British in Africa

Map illustrates newest phase of the war—a strong Italian bid to either capture the Suez canal or render it valueless by closing the eastern end of the Red sea. Success in this move would cut Britain's lifeline to the east, seriously imperil her hold on African colonies and possessions. Italians recently bombed the oil port of Haifa (1) in Palestine, struck at railway connecting Marsa-Matruh (2) and Alexandria. Italians advancing into British Somaliland occupied Zella, British port on the Gulf of Aden, entrance to the Red sea. Other Italian raids were reported on the strategic port of Aden (4).—IIN photo.

Commands Vets Hop Growers' Opinion for Marketing

All of 1940 Crop Upholds Decision Of Hop Control Board Made Recently

Opinions of 30 hop growers assembled in Salem yesterday fundamentally upheld the recent decision of the hop control board in setting the salable quantity of 1940 hops at approximately 4000 bales in excess of the estimated harvest.

The growers and brokers were attending the second in a series of hearings on the coast to aid the secretary of agriculture in determining what quantity of the crop to make marketable.

The 4000 bale excess would serve as a cushion against eventualities or to take care of a possible surplus, said G. Osborn Hyde, solicitor for the United States department of agriculture, presided at the session which was held under the new marketing agreement. Hyde was accompanied here by Donald A. Weiland, assistant marketing specialist for the federal department.
