M'Vey Decision Against State

Court Holds Royalties Are not Owing to Land Board

Because the Samuel McVey Sand and Gravel company of Newherg took gravel from the Willamette river above low water mark it does not owe the state of Oregon $6000 royalties under an 1874 statute, Circuit Judge L. G. Lewelling ruled yesterday in a case involving the state land board and the McVey company.

The decision was recognized in legal circles as setting a precedent as to the state's rights to recover royalties for gravel or sand removed from a stream within its jurisdiction. An appeal is expected.

In its original complaint, the land board has charged that the McVey company owed approximately $12,000 in back royalty fees, but the amount was later reduced to $6000 after investigation of the company's books by the state's counsel.

The cours also decided for the plaintiff in the case of Walter B. Minier vs. V. G. Alexander and Guy O. and Frieda Smith in which a decree quieting title to real property was sought. Judge Lewelling ruled against
