Teacher's College Arranges to Meet New Students; Freshman Week Gives Opportunity; Tea Sponsored by Men

MONMOUTH—Oregon College of Education will open September 23 with registration for new students. Tuesday entrance tests will be taken by freshmen and new students who have not had the same tests elsewhere. Wednesday registration of returned students will be held.

An innovation to be featured this year will be "Freshman Week." This is arranged to make new students acquainted with the campus, and to give them an early opportunity to meet faculty members before classes start. Tours of the buildings on the campus will promptly familiarize them with situations they will soon be meeting daily, and offer aid in eliminating that feeling of strangeness in halls and corridors so often confronting young students. Traditions of the school will be sketched in during progress of the tour, and features of interest on the campus will be emphasized. Each tour will be directed by faculty members who teach freshmen classes.

Monday night a play night will be held in the physical education building to enable new students to meet those who have previously attended here. President C. A. Howard will welcome the freshman class as a group Tuesday afternoon at a special assembly to further the plan of orientation. Educational and social possibilities of the college will be explained.

An informal tea is planned for Wednesday afternoon, sponsored by officers of the Associated men students and Associated women students. New students will meet the dean of women and dean of men at the tea.

Wednesday night a registration dance is planned for all students and faculty in Recreation hall. Classes begin Thursday. Friday night a get-acquainted-mix for all students featuring sports, games and refreshments is scheduled in the physical education building. Saturday night a dance, sponsored by the Associated students will occur in the same building.
