SILVERTON—The good chamber of commerce member realizes that business touches every social and private interest and when business has expired or been throttled, the breath of life can no longer be breathed into the simplest social idea. So said Walter W. R. May, for five years manager of Portland chamber of commerce, as he spoke before Silverton's chamber in its reorganization meeting here Wednesday night, following a dinner served by the Royal Neighbors.

May briefly reviewed the history of the chambers of commerce from the time "Julius Caesar organized the first chamber of commerce, when he encouraged his citizens to congregate in the Roman Forum to discuss the problems of the day" to the present time when there are "3000 chambers in the United States numbering more than three million members."

He spoke of its job as doing the work "of the community because the arts, culture, professions, agriculture, everything that goes to make up life, centers around ability to have commerce one with the other."

Parry Rose, president of the chamber, opened the meeting and also presided during the program. Rose explained that V. R. Casebeer, membership chairman, was to have presided but was prevented from doing so because of illness. Rose also announced that the membership drive would get off to a start Tuesday morning with a breakfast of the membership committee and its helpers. The breakfast will be held at George's.

Silverton business houses will remain open for business on Monday and Tuesday nights of the week prior to Christmas, according to announcement made by J. W. Jordan, holiday closing chairman.

The time of closing during those two evenings will be at the discretion of the individual owner, Jordan said.

J. Grills was made chairman of the constitution and by-laws committee and Eroll Ross of the industrial committee. Rose reported. Other committee appointments will be announced following the membership drive.

That's Right...Rocking Chair Shopping!

Speaking of ease in shopping, one of our telephone customers was in the store the other day telling our boys she read in our ad how easy it was to select foods at these markets. After looking about the store a bit she said, "I can see why anyone would like to buy at this store. Everything is so clean and neat and nice, and a child could tell by the price tags that they could save money on nearly everything." But she remarked, "It's sometimes unhandy for me to come to the store. Then I just sit in my chair and phone my order and I don't see that I'd save any more by coming to town to do my shopping, especially since I can get four free deliveries every day and at the same low prices." So if it's inconvenient for you to visit these markets just phone your order. Same Good Food...Same Low Price.
