Don't Look Now..

but... there's many a slip. Every time we've glibly written about a meeting to be held this week or next, we've done it with fingers crossed. Nine chances to ten we'll be writing a postponement story even before the typewriter cools off.

Out to lunch... Mrs. B. F. Pound, on a trip south last week, enjoyed lunch at San Quentin prison. With Mrs. Curtis Johnson, formerly of Salem, she ate in the officers' dining room. You simply order anything you choose from a menu card. We'd never thought of it before, but San Quentin ought to be a nice place to dine.

It can happen here... Yesterday we saw a full bush of camellias, blooming away in the 1400 block on Center street, just as if the silly things didn't know it was December.

You may remember her... Gladys Miller, of the mercantile Millers, who used to go to school in Corvallis and had many friends here, has been appointed head stylist for W. F. Whitney company, one of the great names in the furniture field. Miss Miller is a noted authority on the decorative history of America,
