Gains Improve Wheat Market

Lethargy Shaken as May Contracts Reach Best Level in Month

CHICAGO, Jan. 4-(A)-Early gains that lifted wheat prices al-most a cent, May contracts reaching 88 %, highest since early last month, today knocked the grain market out of its New Year leth-

Buying came partly from interests who sold "short" yesterday to meet improved demand from flour and milling trade sources. Purchases were inspired by reports of improved flour business, strength of securities and fears of possible crop damage in areas without snow protection during the cold wave.

Profit taking whittled away part of the gains but wheat closed 14-% higher than yesterday, May 87%-%, July 82%-4.
Brokers traced some of the wheat buying to mills, as was the case yesterday, only there was a letup in the substantial local offerings that kept prices from ad-vancing Friday. However, lifting of hedges against flour business has brought open interest in wheat down to 49,309,000 bushels as of the close yesterday, lowest on record. Concern about weather was heightened by the fact that recent reports told of wheat greening in some parts of the south-west and of evidence of damage during last November's cold enap. Reseeding is expected to be halted for the time being.

Increased storing of wheat under government loans bore out trade expectations that there would be a spurt just before the deadline. So far 271,410,744 bushels have been accounted for under loan and the total is expected to increase when all applications have been filled. A year ago approximately 167,000,000 bushels

Conference Called by the Spokane Cooperative Bank for Farmers

Representatives

Representatives of farmers' cooperatives in Oregon will meet in Memorial Union hall at Oregon State college Monday, January 6, for a conference of cooperative associations called by the Spokane bank for Cooperatives, according to A. C. Adams, president of the Spokane bank.

The meeting is one of a series being held during December and January at which the bank is making reports to its stockholder-borrowers, and at which the bank's services will be discussed. The Spokane bank for cooperatives is a unit of the farm credit administration.

Coming to Corvallis from Spo-kane will be President Adams, Secretary C. L. Wallmark and Dr. Orlo H. Maughan, director of research of the Farm Credit Administration of Spokane. Dr. Maughan will speak on "What Is Ahead for Agriculture." He will discuss the effect of the defense program on farming, and the prospects ahead after the end of the present war, whatever the outcome. Last year's conference for Oregon, also held in Corvallis, drew an attendance of nearly 100 persons from all parts of the state. This attendance is expected to be exceeded this year, Adams said.
