County Mulls Animal Funds

Decision on whether Marion county will invest $500 from the county emergency fund on predatory animal control in the east part of the county will probably be made within the next few days, county court members indicated Thursday on receipt of a letter from Roy Fugate of the federal biological survey.

Fugate reported that the government agency has a fund of $500 set aside for such work in Marion county, and that it wishes to know the county's final decision in the matter.

Marion county's participation was confused by action of the budget committee in including the item for animal control in the 1941 budget at the second budget meeting after leaving it out at its first meeting.

An opinion is being requested from District Attorney M. B. Hayden whether the expenditure can legally be made from the county general fund.
