"Plexiglas" Car Coming

$100,000 Fair Exhibit, Pontiac, Fisher Due Here Thursday

A leading attraction of the General Motors exhibit at the Golden Gate International exposition, the famous Pontiac "glass" car will go on display at the Herrall-Owens company, 235 South Commercial street, for a two-day period beginning Thursday.

Announcement of the scheduled arrival of the car, which was built by the Fisher body division of the automotive concern to show the details of the "unisteel" turret top type of body construction and various chassis features of the Pontiac line of cars, was made Saturday by B. E. "Kelly" Owens.

Valued at approximately $100,000, the transparent car and other displays constructed by the body-building division of General Motors are being brought to Salem by an especially-built tractor-trailer unit.

The fenders, hood and outer body panels of the "glass" car are constructed of a recently developed transparent plastic material known as "plexiglas."

Wrought by hand into an exact replica of a 1940 Pontiac 4-door deluxe six sedan, the car could be driven out on the highway should the occasion demand, Owens said. The doors open and close, windows roll up and down, and the steering gear operates exactly as in a standard model.

Another world's fair exhibit being brought to Salem through the cooperation of the Pontiac and Fisher body divisions of General Motors illustrates the extent to which a person's judgment of distance is affected by the glass used in the side windows of an automobile. Equipment of the type employed for the standard government depth perception test taken by all aviators as part of their periodic flight physical examinations is used for this purpose, according to Owens.
