Salem Young People to Hear Portland Mission Speakers

A large number of Salem young people will leave this afternoon to attend in Portland the youth section of the National Christian mission, at which Dr. E. Stanley Jones, missionary who spoke here Wednesday, will give the principal address. Both Willamette university and high school students are included.

The program will begin with a world fellowship banquet at 5:30 tonight. Philip Lee, young Chinese pastor from Chicago, will be the speaker. Dr. Jones will speak at 7:30 at the city auditorium.

Discussion groups will occupy the program Saturday, the speakers and leaders including Karl Downs, young negro pastor who has appeared in Salem; Ruth Seabury, Congregational youth worker; Edward H. Bensall, interdenominational youth worker; and G. Hayden Stewart, pastor from Vancouver, B.C.

Muriel Lester, the "Jane Addams of London," and Philip Lee will speak at a youth mass meeting at the city auditorium at 7:30 Saturday night.

The annual meeting of the Oregon Christian Youth assembly will be at 9 o'clock Sunday morning.

Band Director Has Play Part

An actor who can "double in brass." Willamette university has one in Band Director Maurice Brennan, who will play a leading part in the faculty play "Dulcy" on March 10.

In the old days an actor often had to be able to play an instrument and march in a parade to advertise the show. Hence the expression, "double in brass." Brennan, however, will not parade blaring on a brass instrument the day "Dulcy" is presented (although he might have to if Professor William C. Jones, the impresario, thought it would boost the sale of tickets).

But he is going to furnish the music for the play. Not that he will play in the pit, but he will keep a watchful eye on his musicians from the wings when he isn't on the stage. And his part in the farce does call for him to play the piano on the stage in one of the most hilarious scenes.

Dr. Holmes Speaker—Dr. James Holmes of Compton, Calif., who is in Portland this week with the National Christian mission, was a guest speaker at the Girls Industrial school Wednesday afternoon.

Hearing Survey Is Completed

Only Four per Cent of Salem Children Have Tone Deficiencies

Interviews with parents of children with hearing defects at Salem high school Wednesday terminated the two-month survey of children in Salem schools by Dr. Warren H. Gardner, consultant in hearing and vision of the Oregon state board of health. These tests were given under the auspices of the Marion county department of health.

A total of 209 children, or 4 per cent of the school population, was found to have hearing deficiencies among the 5179 pupils tested. These children remain from 320 selected in preliminary tests who were given special study over a period of two months. One hundred sixty pupils had significant deficiencies of which the parents are being informed. Over 60 per cent of the parents were interviewed during the last and present week at the twelve public schools. Salem Heights and St. Vincent's parochial school. Principals are asked to observe the other children in order to determine whether they need special seating, coaching in weak subjects, lip reading and other adjustments designed to make it easier for them to progress at their natural rate.

The value of the tests has already been proved by the recovery of several children to normal hearing after visits to physicians for treatment.

Interesting statistics of the two-month survey include 5179 original group tests, 997 retests, 320 pure tone tests, making a grand total of 6496 hearing tests. In addition, 241 children were given brief medical inspections by the county health officer and 320 interviews were given by the consultant and nurses with parents of deficient hearing pupils.
