As wrong, Bishop Bruce R. Baxter, principal speaker, declared. Among the things "right with the world" are the increasing spread of education, the improvement of health, the constructive use of leisure time and the coming together "as in the chamber of commerce here" of a "large number of people interested in making the good things of the community available for more of the people," the speaker suggested.

Bishop Baxter closed with a warning, however, against complacency and a plea for men and women to recognize that "the road goes on" and there are always forward strides to be taken. Five chamber meet presidents including Sen. McKay and Bingenheimer were present and introduced. The other three were Mayor W. W. Chadwick, B. E. Sisson and William M. Hamilton. Barkley A. It made us feel a little old (We're celebrating our 90th anniversary Sunday, you know) to see the kids plunging later into that mill stream. We do not know from experience (with pardonable pride we insert that our class NEVER lost a glee), but that water ain't bathwater. We watched the kids plunging for a while and then we left. We looked at that water rushing down from the glaciers and began to get cautious. After all, we thought, somebody might think we got these tired old eyes from battling a freshman English text and toss us in.

Italian fascism celebrated its 22nd birthday Sunday. Like many another callow youth it took 21 years to learn that the Greeks had more than a word for it.
