Audience to See Gay Stage

A new departure in stage settings and costumes will be seen in Willamette university's production of "The Comedy of Errors" Saturday night at Leslie auditorium. The stage was designed by Miss Constance Fowler and is considered by the director, Mrs. Genevieve Oppen, as the best yet prepared for a Willamette play.

It features gay colors in a modernistic Greek motif with the functional advantages of different levels connected by ramps and steps. Three separate households are represented on the stage so that the play may be presented without pause.

The pale yellow background of the set will be complemented by the Greek costumes, which, contrary to popular belief, are gay colors like saffron, wine, magenta and green. The costuming was done entirely by the dramatics classes of the university.

"The Comedy of Errors" is being presented by the junior class as a climax of Saturday's May weekend festivities on the campus.
