Just as one tummyfull of vitamins won't sustain an ordin ary specimen of homo sapiens for life, so won't a single ball game maintain a baseball team throughout a season.

But, gosh, our Senators did look right pert in that first one, didn't they? A few mistakes, yes, but on the whole their efforts were entirely satisfying.

The Helser hurler still pitches two ball games in one and keeps folks a-guessing as to whether he'll walk or strikeout the more batsmen, but the southpaw mound citizen continued to display that he does have what it takes and can get lators here at 8:15 tonight, but the ball in there.

Catcher Eddie Adams served ample notice that Wisters won't be running around the satchel paths on our Solons, as they had a vicious habit of doing last year.

But it was the offensive punch displayed by Griffiths' supposedly punchless gang which sent customers home slightly gaga. Fourteen hits practically constitute a basketfull in baseball. In this case, a May-day basketfull.

Sincerity Felt.

Standing with the 3000 folks heads and stood at rigid attensilent tribute to the late George E. Waters, you could fairly feel sincerity that welled up out of the baseball plant he gave the community at a personal sacrifice of some $60,000.

Many men who have risen to so-called higher planes in life would not have commanded the respect shown that crowd for the late George E., as he was intimately known by so many.

And yet, had he been present, it would have embarrassed him. For George E. was anything but a publicity seeker. The publicity angle was the one item that disturbed him most when he ventured into professional baseball a little over a

What would have pleased Geo, E, much more than the tribute so spontaneously given him would have been the mere knowledge that some of Salem's youngster and oldsters were able to attend a baseball game. Time after time did he emphasize the fact he was building the ball park "for Salem and Salem people," of whom he held there were no finer, and not for personal gain.

And another thing: He'd have apologized to the Wenatchee management for giving the Chiefs son (5) and Roche. such a beating.

He was that kind of a guy. -0-

Shake hands with Charles Ernest Bates, the nimble-footed fellow who is policing first base for our Senators, and who is number nine in this corner's Solon sketches. So sorry, you'll have to shake his left one, for that's the one he uses for such items as throwing baseballs, shoveling calories, et

Grooms Threaten to Strike, Owner Flails Conditions Of Track on Eve of Derby

By SID FEDER

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 2 .- (AP)-A batch of trouble started to cook up at Churchill Downs tonight, just when everything had looked dandy for the 67th running of the Kentucky derby tomorrow with a wide open field of 11 three-year old princes of

First off, Owner Lou Tufano announced flatly that the Downs' racing strip was so hard he would scratch his Marketwise, winner of last week's Wood Memorial at Jamaica, unless it rained before post time for this richest derby in history. This would leave ten to run, headed by the "big boys", Porter's Cap, Our Boots and Whirlaway, with an expected crowd of 100,000 cheering them on and old man weather promising neither rain nor mud. And right on top of that, it was learned the grooms in the barns beyond the backstretch have several complaints and have threatened a "strike" for two hours before the first race is called to the post unless they're satisfied. The grooms demand better plumbing facilities for themselves and a flat rate of $10 for each winning mount one of them leads from the stable to the paddock. Neither side would make any official comment tonight, but the management was reported ready to talk things over when the grooms made their "beefs" officially.

In the clubhouse for today's races, Tufano was all worked up over the track conditions. He pointed out that a roller, run over the strip today, would be used again tomorrow and that "the sur-face is as hard as concrete."

"I'm not taking any chances Keiser, Auburn and Aurora hurting or ruining my colt for topped divisions of the annual ninety Kentucky derbies," the Marion county grade school track Long Island (New York) paving and field meet, held at the state contractor shouted.
