Legion to Move Into New Home Monday Night; Joint Meet Set

Oregon's second largest American Legion post, Capital post No. 9 of Salem, moves Monday night into its new home at Chemeke and Cottage streets. Formerly the Unitarian church, the building was purchased and has been completely renovated at a cost exceeding $21,000.

Trustees describe it as one of the finest Legion halls in the northwest.

Financing of the quarters was provided by a post building fund and by gifts from members and other Salem citizens.

Members of the building committee were the board of trustees, comprising Stumbo, Ronald Jones, O. E. Palmateer, George Averett and Brazier Small.

Stumbo said Friday that Stephen F. Chadwick of Seattle, past national commander; Alford Kelley, state commander; Governor Charles A. Sprague and other state officials would take part in dedication ceremonies May 12. Chadwick is to be the principal speaker.

Past commanders' night will be the fun night of the year, with a crab feed planned.

Legionnaire Frank Struble was the architect for the remodeling, which has occupied several weeks. Viecko and Hannaman were the general contractors.

Main Floor Complete.—The main floor, which contains Legion and auxiliary meeting rooms, has fibre board walls and ceilings and hardwood floors. It can be made into one large room. Platforms are built around the outside for seats.

The basement includes a large dining room, modern kitchen with gas range and water heater, lounge and rest rooms and a meeting room for Boy Scout troop nine, sponsored by the post.

The building is heated by an air-conditioning oil furnace and ventilated by ceiling fans, both thermostatically controlled.

The structure, 84 by 42 feet in size, is on a 163 by 60 foot lot, two blocks from the postoffice. A new roof has been applied, and the outside painted.

Petitioners Filing First Papers For US Citizenship Scheduled For Questioning by Court

Questioning of petitioners filing first papers for United States citizenship is scheduled for completion Saturday morning at the Marion county courthouse, where during the last three days names of 38 such persons have been tentatively accepted.

Next naturalization court, slated for early June, will deal with applicants for final papers.

Fifteen of the first 25 whose original papers have been filed are changing their allegiance from Canada; two from Russia; two from Yugoslavia; two from Norway; two from England; two from Germany; one from Scotland and one from Denmark.

More time than has been customary is required in questioning applicants for citizenship, according to federal examiners, who are required to get additional information made necessary by alien registration and national preparedness act.

Municipal Court.—Richard Harlung, route three, drunk; 30 days suspended. Howard R. Woodburn, route four; failure to observe stop sign; fined $2.50.

Defense, both national and local, was discussed at a luncheon here Friday at which Governor Charles A. Sprague entertained Frank Bane, Washington, DC, connected with the division of state and local cooperative defense, and Elmer Goudy, state relief administrator.

Governor Sprague said it was apparent that the state of Oregon and some of its political subdivisions, would play an important part in the national defense program.

Realtors Hear Discussion on Social Frontiers. Frontiers of social endeavor have replaced geographical frontiers for youth of today, Dr. A. Jensen, Oregon College of Education professor, told the Salem realty board at its luncheon Friday.

More frontiers exist today than ever before, Dr. Jensen declared, but they must be sought out. As a field in which a problem exists, into which "you can put your teeth and bite hard," he cited the situation of the mentally ill. The increasing number of mental cases could be reduced materially in a generation if it were set as a goal.

Control of social diseases can be accomplished to a large degree, Dr. Jensen said, as shown in Scandinavian countries and in the US army and navy. He reminded the board beginnings have been made in the control of syphilis, "more serious than infantile paralysis and as contagious as measles."

Other frontiers he described as perfection of industry and reduction of crime. He praised the progress of America in literature.

Van Winkle Rules On Death Funds. Money or property of a stranger killed by another person, except $125 for funeral expenses, shall be taken over by the coroner and placed in the custody of the county treasurer, Attorney General I. H. Van Winkle held here Friday.

Missing Envoy

Whereabouts of Sir Ronald Campbell, Britain's minister to Yugoslavia, remained a mystery despite reports that Campbell had been taken aboard an Italian torpedo boat while attempting to reach the Greek island of Crete from Yugoslavia. Official British quarters said they had no confirmation of the Rome report.

Engineer Gets Four Year Job Platting County

An assignment expected to take four years was handed Gordon Tower, Salem engineer and draftsman, Friday when R. "Tad" Shelton, county assessor, employed him to draw a new set of ownership-plats for Marion county. The plats will replace those in use for the past 47 years, a set of 72 maps, each four feet square.

The last county budget committee set aside $2400 for the project, merely as a sum sufficient to get it underway.

For nearly half a century property changes have been penciled in on the old maps, erased and re-written time and again as real estate moved. Although they were originally of heavy material, many have grown thin with much use and difficult to decipher.

Tower prepared all the details for the set of county road maps currently in use, first such maps complete with all roads, bridges and similar details.
