British and Germans Give Versions, Reasons for Flight of Hess

Churchill to Face No. 3 Nazi Party Calls Deserter Deluded

Purge Idea Is Scoffed By Berlin

BERLIN, Wednesday, May 14 -(A)-Adolf Hitler called all high nazi figures and government leaders to a conference late Tuesday soon after the disclosure of Rudolf Hess' flight to Britain, which aroused the German people as they had rarely been aroused in this war.

The assembled party leaders, said the nazi news service, "gave the fuehrer - who spoke to the gathering - an impressive demonstration of a determined will for victory." The official announcement said nothing of the Hess incident in connection with the conference.

Hess himself, who had suddenly abandoned the third place in party power for the status of a war prisoner in England, was officially labeled by his nazi party associates as a deluded seeker of peace. They put him down as a sick, deranged and muddled idealist ridden with "hallucinations" traceable to World war injuries, and the party declared in a formal statement:

"This will not interfere with the continuation of the war against England (which was) forced upon the German people."

Hess, who had stood in the high leadership behind only Hitler himself and Reichsmarshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering, was described as a once-brilliant man reduced by poor health to the status of a superstitious nostraum seeker and patronizer of "various aids, mesmerizers, astrologers and so forth."

Any suggestion that he had fled in fear was ridiculed. "Intimations abroad that there is to be some shakeup or purge are idiotic," a spokesman declared. "There was persecution complex involved in Hess' conduct and the gestapo isn't on the scent of any-

Not until late Tuesday did the Germans learn from the newspapers and radio that the deputy fuehrer had landed in Scotland from a flight which started last Saturday in Augsburg, Germany, but his "fateful delusion" overshadowed even interest in the Reports that his wife and small son also had left the country were strongly denied; it was said they were wholly free and had the sympathy of all party members. Specially denied was a report that Frau Hess had gone to Ankara, Turkey; it was added that she was at her home in Germany.

In speeches made over the last year Hess had said on one occasion that there could be no peace "until England is definitely struck down." Again he said that "divine justice" had turned against Britain.

It was declared emphatically that his flight would in no. way affect internal or foreign policy; that it would not interfere with the pursuit of the war.

"Any use made of him will be completely disregarded by the German people because there is no way of knowing under what circumstances he may be forced to talk."

English Say Hess Reveals Nazi Disgust

LONDÓN, Wednesday, May 14-(AP)-Rudolf Hess shortly will be faced by Prime Minister and to give up vital secrets that might conceivably affect the future course of war.

Whether Hitler's long-time friend and turncoat deputy will describe the real inside story of Germany to the veteran journalist, Churchill, was a matter of high speculation.

But highly placed Britons altle-browed German's almost in- it credible flight to Britain had given this country more military advantage "than a major victory on the battlefield."

The effect on German morale of his flight alone was worth that much, they said, and Churchill himself was quick to seize upon this point when he declared on learining of Hess' arrival:

"The magget is in the apple." When and where the prime minister and the surrendered prisoner of war will meet was not disclosed, but the London Daily Mail said Hess already had been moved from a Glasgow hospital to "a place nearer London."

Hess has described to these questioners real conditions in Germany and amid the nazi hierarchy, the paper said, adding: "He spoke freely and frank-

"The assumption that his curious conduct-which is a deep personal tragedy-was due to mental disorder is the most charitable view to be taken, and that view is to be held in view of the present knowledge."

Adolf Hitler himself took over Hess' old party office, which had been called "office of the deputy of the fuehrer," and re-named it "party chancellery."

As to Hess' former position, a German spokesman explained it

"What happened 18 months ago (this was at the time that Hess was made Hitler's deputy) was that Hess was not promoted to third-ranking nazi, but was demoted from second place.

deputy to Hitler he would normally have succeeded to the fuehrership. But in view of the abilities and temperaments of the available men, Hitler by formal act chose Goering as his immediate successor.' The nazi party's communique stated that Hess apparently had thought that through "old English acquaintances" he was "still able to bring about an understanding between Germany and England through personal action," and then went on: "In fact, as already confirmed through a report from London, he bailed out of a plane in Scotland near a place which he wanted to visit and apparently was his personal disgust with the nazi party and its policy. The tension between party leaders appears to have reached a state of considerable acuteness in recent weeks."

The Daily Herald warned against overestimating the effects in Germany of Hess' flight, saying "there is no reason to think of Hess as the leader of any widespread revolt against the fuehrer." Authoritative British sources declared, however, that the desertion of the No. 3 nazi was concrete evidence that Hess "and others in the inner councils of that he carried no peace plan, and the nazis" had decided Germany that his desertion was dictated by could not beat a Britain backed purely personal motives.

Officials understandingly were loath to divulge what specific military advantage Britain might gain from the 800-mile flight of Hess to Scotland, although there was one report he had brought definite and vital information concerning Germany's air force. Authorized statements stressed that Hess had no specific message,
