

Lions Club Names New Officer; Virgil T. Golden Is President

Virgil T. "Tommy" Golden, manager of the Clough-Barrick company, was unanimously elected president of the Salem Lions club at luncheon in the Marion hotel Thursday noon. He will take office on June 1.

Other new officers of the club are: Walter R. Dry, first vice-president; Monroe Cheek, third vice-president; Roy Houser and W. T. Porter, directors. The club will vote next Thursday to break a tie left by this week's election between Hollis Huntington and Edward Majek, candidates for second vice-president.

Speaker at the election meeting was Otto K. Paulus, Salem attorney, who described the Willamette valley's climate as sub-Mediterranean and declared the war in Europe left it up to this valley and to New Zealand to grow the specialty drug and seed crops formerly supplied by the Mediterranean sea countries.

He cited sharp increases in prices, particularly for medicinal plants such as digitalis, and for spices, as indicative of the worth of these crops here. "We have yet to take care of the political situation—to gain tariff protection against the competition of cheap foreign labor," Paulus said of the specialty crops as a continuing farm enterprise in the valley.

New Streamline Style Wins US Public Approval

Hit car of the 1941 auto year is the two-door streamliner sedan, those windstreamed cars with the low, tapered backs you are seeing in greater numbers every day. Auto records show that more than one-third of all car sales have been in this type of body style since the introduction of the 1941 cars. Newest addition to this popularity group is this Nash "Streamliner Sedan," a full six-passenger car offered in all three Nash 1941 series. Various two-tone color combinations are available. The car shown is the new Ambassador "600."

Highly desirable—nearly 3,000 men want the girl; millions want the Pontiac car. She is beautiful Vera Hruha, Czech ice skating star, who pleaded for an American to marry her when her U. S. visa expired. She got thousands of proposals, took none, went to Canada and re-entered this country under the Czech quota. You can Czech on this if you like.

Oddities ... in the News

CAMP LANDING, Fla.—(AP)—Strangest casualty in the US military training program to date was reported at this post.

During a recent 167th infantry maneuver, a soldier became seasick while running across a swaying pontoon bridge.

CAMP SHELBY, Miss.—(AP)—The men of Headquarters company, 112th quartermaster regiment, 37th division, claim that their parrot, Stanley, not only can speak but that he also can read.

To support the contention, Mess Sergeant Fred G. Beebe of Cincinnati, Ohio, avers that, in a spirit of jest, he changed a menu item from "beef stew" to "parrot stew." He showed the revision to Stanley. The parrot bit a chunk out of the sergeant's arm.

CAMP CLAIBORNE, La.—Sergeant Gordon F. Brooks of Duluth, Minn., and battery B, 125th field artillery, was engaged busily in the imaginary shooting of imaginary shells during firing practice.

The officer in charge inspected him quizzically and asked: "What are you firing?" "Shrapnel, sir," Brooks replied as he pretended he was inserting a shell into the fuse cutter.

Suddenly he recalled that shrapnel doesn't require a fuse. He flushed.

His mates, in keeping with the fanciful nature of the exercise, imagined he was pretty embarrassed.

BLOOMFIELD, Iowa.—(AP)—Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Henderson were scheduled to celebrate their golden wedding anniversary next November 22.

But they went separate ways the other day after 49½ years together. Mrs. Henderson was granted a divorce here on grounds of cruel and inhuman treatment.

PORTLAND.—(AP)—Next time you're in the mood to cache some stolen property, try a detective's room, preferably in a police station.

A juvenile, suspected of stealing $7 and two diamond rings, was questioned without success here. Then he broke down and admitted the articles were in a room in the detective bureau at the police station.

Despite the tip, the two detectives searched for more than an hour before they found them.
