guilty to larceny of an automobile, and Judge L. H. McMahan, Dedication who earlier this month had sentenced Walters and then suspended the sentence, added another Scheduled year to the suspended penitentiary term and proceeded to order release of the prisoner.

That Walters had suddenly lost balance temporarily after years of honest labor and that he would find himself and again lead a worthwhile life within the law was the theory expressed by McMahan

The car about which the second case revolved was a sedan belonging to LaVerne C. Smith, "borrowed" by Walters for a trip to Woodburn, where his wife had been staying. Walters told the judge he plans to return with his family to his former home in Nebraska.
