US Coast Defense Guns Boom—$2000 Per Shell

Van Winkle to Take Time to Books Ruling

It probably will be a week or 10 days before Attorney General I. H. VanWinkle writes an opinion on the sufficiency of referendum petitions received by the secretary of state here Friday attacking the 1941 legislative act extending free use of textbooks to parochial and private schools, he announced Saturday.

The petitions were received by the state department on the advice of the attorney general but were not officially filed.

Principal question involved is whether approximately 8000 signatures on the petitions obtained prior to the recent action of the state supreme court in rewriting the referendum ballot title are legal.

The petitions contained 16,300 names and were presented by the association against public taxes for private schools with headquarters in Portland. C. A. Rice is president of the association.

Persons opposed to the referendum measure contend that the action of the supreme court in changing the ballot title invalidated all signatures obtained up to that time. They said any attempt on the part of the secretary of state to file the referendum petitions would be countered with an injunction proceeding in the court.

The ballot title was attacked by Senator Rex Ellis, Umatilla county, and Representative Allan Carson, Marion county, on the ground that it was misleading and prejudicial.

Appeal by First National Bank Seen in Marion County Decree For $18,000 in Back Taxes

Although generally presumed to be slated for appeal to the state supreme court, the decree for Marion county in the case brought against it by the First National bank of Portland may mean payment shortly of more than $18,000 taxes and interest on fixtures in the leased quarters of the bank's local branch.

While attorneys representing the bank were out of the city the past weekend, the nature of the case indicated that it would probably be appealed, observers believed.

Question involved is whether the fixtures are real or personal property, since personal property of national banks may not be taxed. Tax payments hinging on the decision are those assessed from 1929, date the Portland First National came into Salem, to 1941.
