Mock Conflict Started With 52,000 Men

By JACK BEARDWOOD
CAMP HUNTER LIGGETT, Calif., June 23.—(AP)—Heavy packs bobbing on their backs, tin hats resting a jaunty angles on their perspiring foreheads and heavy boots plopping rhythmically through four inches of dust, soldiers Monday marched off to a mock war.

The boys in khaki are the malleable men who have been converted from grocery clerks to machine gunners, from filling station operators to artillerymen, from white collar jobs to fatiguing tasks of signal, engineer or communications units.

They range from veteran soldiers with 25 years' service to selectees with but a few weeks' training.

They are tanned, toughened men, of whom Lieut. General John L. DeWitt said in an interview Monday:

"The United States army is composed today of the highest type of enlisted men it has ever had. It is an inspiration to watch them."

"With proper training, proper equipment and sufficient leadership, it can't be a peer in the world, no matter what army you may select for comparison." The mock war was declared early Monday morning between the southern "Reds," made up of approximately 18,000 troops from Fort Ord, and the "Blue" army of 34,000 from Fort Lewis, Wash. Soldiers have been marching and trucking to initial positions all day, eager for their first contact with the "enemy" sometime Tuesday.

Over the roads and sun-baked fields of Hunter Liggett, the blues moved northwestward almost endlessly all day. Up gulches and through tree-filled meadows they came marching in double files, raising columns of dust, pausing to cool their feet as they walked through shallow streams.

DeWitt pointed out a survey made this morning showed 2418 officers and 50,405 men were participating in the biggest military maneuver ever held in the west.

"For comparison," General DeWitt said, "that is 10,000 men more than in both the Union and Confederate armies when they battled at Shiloh. If our information is correct, it is 20,000 more men than General Wavell had in Libya when he drove the Italians out."

CAMP HUNTER LIGGETT, Calif., June 23.—(AP)—Declaring the army and navy must "work closely on joint plans for the defense of the Pacific coast," Lieut. Gen. John L. DeWitt, fourth army commander, announced Monday the navy would have an official observer at the biggest maneuvers ever held in the far west.

Rear Admiral John Wills Greenslade, new commandant of 12th naval district, will come here as guest of General DeWitt.

Walker to Act For Governor

President Dean Walker of the state senate will arrive here Tuesday from Independence to serve as the state's chief executive during the absence of Governor Charles A. Sprague, who leaves late Wednesday for Boston, Mass.

Governor Sprague will attend the annual conference of state executives in Boston and will not return to Salem until about the middle of July.

Commands

Rear Admiral Simon
Rear Admiral Manley H. Simons, above, has been installed as commandant of the Fifth Naval district with headquarters at Norfolk, Va. He succeeds Rear Admiral Joseph K. Taussig.

Work Starts to Enlist Thousands in Oregon's Civil Reserves

Actual work of enlisting thousands of Oregon citizens into the civil reserves, to protect the civilian population in event of air attacks, got under way in a number of counties Monday, Jerrold Owen, state civilian defense coordinator, reported.

Owen sent out a bulletin Saturday advising the county defense councils to check powder and dynamite dealers and report any unusual purchases of these explosives. The purpose of this check is to discourage sabotage, Owen declared. Civilians will not be compensated for injuries received in line of duty.

"In our communities adjacent to military reservations, air bases and civilian defense projects, there should be set up as soon as possible an intensive and comprehensive leisure-time activity program for the personnel of armed forces, defense workers and their families," Owen advised county defense councils.

"This would be valuable in maintaining morale on the home front and pay dividends to the cities affected."

Owen further suggested that cities in which troops stop overnight during mass movements should make provision to entertain the troops.

Governor Charles A. Sprague said the defense program was well in hand. The city of Portland has requested 100,000 civilian reserve applications while Jackson and Umatilla counties each have requested 10,000 applications.

KANSAS CITY.—(AP)—A back-seat driver has paid for her advice.

Mrs. George Byrne told Municipal Judge Edmund B. Keith she insisted her daughter Genevieve, make a turn even though the daughter kept saying it was wrong.

Judge Smith canceled the $1.50 traffic ticket given the daughter and assessed the mother $1 in court costs, adding:

"If you are going to drive from the back seat you will have to learn to watch the signs."

SPOKANE, June 19.—(AP)—Richard Shrapless waited eight years for his wife, Emma, to come back after she told him she was in love with another man and went away, he testified in asking for a divorce.

"That was right after our golden wedding anniversary," he added. "I'm 83 and Emma's 76. She isn't back, so I want to insure my future happiness."

He got the divorce.

FORT GEORGE G. MEADE, Md.—(AP)—Master Sergeant Charles W. Getty had a free day and:

In the morning he was married. In the afternoon he received a degree from Georgetown university, where he attended the foreign service school.

FORT SAM HOUSTON, Tex.—(AP)—A soldier who would rather rest than work reported daily at the clinic.

Apparently he was suffering from aphonia—loss of voice. He failed to respond to treatment, so puzzled officers tried a new remedy.

An orderly snatched the trooper's wallet and ran. The "patient" leaped to the pursuit, shouting:

"Stop that guy."
The disease was diagnosed quickly then as "goldbricking."

FORT JACKSON, SC.—(AP)—The army chief wouldn't listen, so a prospective volunteer decided to tell it to the marines.

He telephoned post headquarters and asked to speak with "the general." Informed that would be impossible, he retorted:

"All right. I just wanted to enlist in the army."
He rejected advice to go to a recruiting station and snapped: "I'll join the marines."

BAKER.—(AP)—Pete McCann, who collapsed while hitch-hiking from Pendleton to Baker to answer a draft induction call, is recovering and may soon be able to enter the army, selective service officials report.

McCann collapsed at La Grande but later was allowed to proceed toward Baker. By the time he reached there he was seriously ill with typhoid fever. He told the board then, "I'd like to get into your army."

Old Oregon Trail Commission Lays Plans for Series of Celebrations at Parley

Necessity of an adequate "build up" for a series of celebrations to be promoted in 1943, in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the Old Oregon Trail, was stressed at the first meeting of the Old Oregon Trail commission here Monday.

Phil Parrish, Portland newspaperman and chairman of the commission, presided. The commission was created by an act of the 1941 legislature.

"We have a real opportunity to publicize the old Oregon Trail and attract a large number of visitors to Oregon," Governor Charles A. Sprague said.

First definite action of the commission will be the employment of a so-called "advance man" to contact many towns and cities extending along the trail from Independence, Mo., to Oregon City.

A part-time publicity agent will be hired later.

Celebrations already are being discussed at Baker, Pendleton, The Dalles, Oregon City and Champoux Park.

Citizens and towns in Oregon off the direct trail route will be requested to join in the observance.

"The whole state is interested in the history of the old Oregon Trail," Roy Meyers, Eagle Creek, a member of the commission, declared.

The Oregon City celebration probably will be the last of the series to be held.

A proposal to launch state-wide organization in states through which the trail passes also was advanced.

Annual Oregon celebrations, with dates definitely fixed from year to year, will be asked to stress Oregon Trail history in their programs.

SMOOTH AT EVERY SPEED

Try a tankful today and feel the difference at any speed blended together in tested, scientific proportions to run your car with a new, undreamed-of smoothness. One fuel keeps your motor smooth on the hard pull... another reduces knocks at traffic speeds... another assures smoothness at higher speeds. And so it goes—smoothly all the way.

Try this amazing blend of seven great gasolines today. Go fast. Slow. Fast again—smooth at every speed.

Fast. Slow. Now speed up again. That's the way you drive every day.

At one of these traffic speeds your motor probably fails to run smoothly. That is, with ordinary gasoline. Some motors run smoothly at low speeds but not at highway speeds. Other motors are best at the high speeds but balk at low traffic speeds, or on the pick-up. What to do about it? Just use this different kind of gasoline that's smooth at every speed.

It's 7 gasolines blended into one. Big scientific names such as Polymerized gasoline, Alkylated gasoline are on the Finer Flying A roster. Re-refined, Cracked, Solvent-refined, Straight-run and Natural gasolines complete the magic seven. All seven are
