If Joseph Barrow Louis, known quite widely as the heavyweight boxing champion of the world (although I don't know why he should want to include a lot of the current globe) was ever badly hurt in his championship chase of nimble Billy Conn, the pictures of the fight do not show it.

At least these eyes of mine couldn't detect a single instant when Louis did not appear fully in control of his senses.

The film, the best fight picture I ever saw, shows most distinctly that Louis was stung plenty pert in the 12th round, all right, but other than to cause him to back up rather than plod in as he had been doing throughout the fight, the blows weren't evidently dam-

In fact, Louis at the close of the 12th was once more carrying the fight to Billy the Kid with no little fistic authority. Had he been hurt as badly as most fight writers said, could he have recovered so quickly? Would he not have tried to hold on and weather the round?

The pictures reveal it was Conn, not Louis, who started toward the wrong corner at the end of the 12th. Louis stalked to his corner with the same deadpan expression, with the same springy step and, apparently, as unhurt as he had been in any of the previous rounds.

Referee Right

Not for an instant is yours sincerely attempting to take any credit from Conn, whom the pictures reveal did put up a whale of a battle and for whom the judges and referee unanimously scored a win up to the 13th round. It's just written reports would have us be-

Furthermore, the film as I saw it revealed that many of those punches Conn threw in the third, fourth, sixth, seventh, eighth, ninth, 10th and 11th rounds hit nothing more than Louis's gloves or arms. Not all of them, no-but a larger percentage than the blow-by-blow radio version and the written

Hooks hurt, yes, but they don't jar like the short. straight sock or the uppercut with which Louis hit Conn in the 13th.

As for those accusations that Conn was given a short count in the 13th, or that the referee should have let him continue, still them, please, The film shows that Conn got up at the count of 10, all right, but that he was standing there with his arms at his sides and his mouth open. He was a wide-open tar-

Still Lack Punch

If our Senators are to make a bid for a first division berth, it'll have to be at the expense of the Western International's two top field stands. clubs this week. They take on the Yakimas, who spanked Spokane out of the loop lead by bagging a twin bill Sunday, in a four-game session through Thursday, and then are hosts to Spokane Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

Griffiths' gang is still sorely in need of plate punch. Unless it is provided by big Ed Coleman, when and if he returns to the team, or unless Bates, Bergstrom, Lightner and Adams begin to hit around 50 points higher apiece, the chances for a first division finish are as remote as a seat in the US senate for Hit-

It was well-known and well-ad vertised at season's beginning that our Solons would be the weaker offensive outfit in the circuit, but no one figured they'd be as impotent as they have been so far. There was every reason to believe that Bergstrom, Petersen, Lightner and Bates would bat up around the .300 mark. None of Leslies them has been that high since the Daisy Maes first week of the season. Therein lies the difference between their current position, a fight for fourth place with Tacoma, and a second or third place spot.

PORTLAND, June 23.-(Special)-Ho-hum-these class AA Coast league baseball clubs are just plain duck soup for our class B Western International league Senators.

Yep, our Legislators whipped the Beavers here Monday night just like they bested the San Diego Padres and San Francisco Seals previously this season. They did it 7 to 5, with Eddie Adams hammering a two run homer over the 351-feet left field barrier to put 'em ahead 5-4 in the seventh, and with Bob Bergstrom doubling two more across

Griffiths, who hit Monday night's coast league pitching like he owned it, singled with one away in the seventh and Eddie Adams picked on the first pitch served to him by Joe Gonzales, driving it out of the park and Griffiths across the plate in front of him,

Bergstrom doubled' down the left field foul line in the eighth, sending Petersen and Lightner, both of whom had singled, across with the game clinchers. Dierickx, who received credit for the win, allowed the Beavers one tally in the eighth on a walk to Reich and consecutive singles to Gill and Norbert, and was in trouble in the ninth until the Little Skipper pulled him out with a lightning double play on Reich's ground smash.

Adams, Griffiths and Lightner combined to get six of the 11 blows the Solons gathered off Gonzales, Each got two, with Adams getting a double to go with his homer and accounting for three runs, It looked like Eddie was out to show Schefter & Co., who peddled him down the river in a straight trade for Eddie Wilson, whom they subsequently released.

The Bevos got but four blows off Helser in five innings, none off Simpson in his one-third frame and but two off Dierickx. Ted Norbert gave our Solons' chuckers the most trouble, whacking a homer and two singles in three trips that accounted for three of the five Bevo markers.

TACOMA, June 23 -(AP)- Three singles, a wild pitch and an outfield out in the last half of the ninth inning provided the two runs necessary for the Tacoma Tigers to defeat the San Francisco Seals, 5 to 4, in an exhibition game here Monday night.
