SPOKANE, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Ray Orteig of Vancouver, greeting big Mike Budnick with a two-bagger when the Spokane moundman appeared in a relief role Friday night, drove home three runs to hand the Western International league All-Stars a 5 to 2 triumph over the champion Spokane Indians.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—The old grads up in section H who used to worry about the game lasting through the bottle now are worrying about the bottle lasting through the game as a result of the new football substitution rule which, we are led to believe, will turn the games into endurance contests, with the fans doing the enduring.

The rule received a mumbled introduction, as it was given its first tests in all star-pro games wherein the all star coaches were trying to give as many players as much chance to play as possible, and the pros, possibly with impish design, tried to show how horrible unlimited substitutions could make a game if a coach were inclined to ignore the public or were of skittish disposition and yanked a player whenever the other team gained a yard.

The idea behind the rule was to gain some sort of balance between large and small squads, and to cut down on injuries. We don't think the first reason will stand up, as there is a limit to the number of men a team can use effectively and even the coach of a big squad isn't going to substitute too freely in a tight contest. He's going to leave in his best men as much as possible.

As to injuries, a player going in cold is much more liable to suffer injury than a player already warmed up. The first bump it's the one you feel, and it's going to be a rough afternoon for the player going in cold a dozen times.

We think that if any one player could be substituted once each quarter it would be sufficient, but we don't think the new rule will make so much difference, although it undoubtedly will drag out a game somewhat.

How much it will drag out the game is up to the coaches, and officials. If a coach wants to make a travesty of a contest and thereby give a robust kick in the wallet pocket to the sport which is his bread and butter, he isn't far sighted, to say the least. If the officials enforce the 25-second rule strictly they can do much to discourage over-zealous substituting.

However, it is not the substitution rule which is causing the officials the most concern. It is the new rule allowing the ball to be passed forward by hand in the backfield, or back of the line.

This rule presents all sorts of possibilities, some of which create confusing situations. For instance, the old tackle-around play, one of the game's most crushing attacks when executed properly, might be revived.

In such a case, however, the tackle would be taking what amounts to a forward pass, and another rule provides a penalty for an illegal man taking a forward pass. If the tackle were not eligible to receive a forward pass would he be eligible to take a ball handed forward toward him back of the line?

The rule also, in effect, creates a six-man backfield. A tackle steps backward for a yard, pivots, and is handed the ball by the fullback, thus creating a splinter play with the tackle carrying the ball.

These possible situations all need to be clarified, but it is a dead clinch that sometime during the season some new circumstance will arise that had not been contemplated.

The rules makers have to learn through experience, even if it is someone else's experience.

Novikoff Tops Loop Hitters

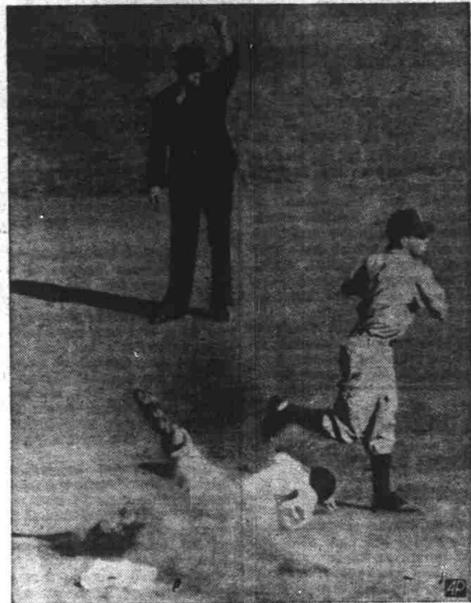

CHICAGO, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Lou Novikoff, Milwaukee outfielder, won the American association batting championship after all.

Figures compiled by Home News bureau revealed Friday that the brewer slugger hit 370 for 90 games as compared to Lou Klein's 387 mark for 111 games. Klein, Columbus shortstop, was rated the hitting champion at the season's end last Sunday, but a check of the box scores disclosed an error in a game at Minneapolis July 13.

The corrected figures gave Klein 362 times at bat and 133 hits as against Novikoff's 385 times at bat and 135 hits.

Novikoff formerly played with Los Angeles of the Pacific Coast league and recently joined the Chicago Cubs of the National League.

Hopp Bites Dust in Vain

Umpire Bill Klem's upraised arm signaled Johnny Hopp of the Cardinals out on this play by Pee Wee Reese at second base in the Cardinal-Dodger game at St. Louis. It was on this throw, however, that Reese of the Brooklyn Dodgers hit Umpire Leo Ballanfant at first, permitting Don Padgett to reach second.

Oaks Sink Padres

OAKLAND, Calif., Sept. 12.—(AP)—Oakland batters looked at five different San Diego pitchers Friday night but that didn't prevent them from outslugging the Padres and winning 9 to 8 and drop them to third place.

Oakland scored five runs in the first three innings off Dilbeck and Ahlbourg. San Diego tied the score with three and two respectively in the third and fourth innings. The Oaks loosed a three-run barrage on Olsen and Pillette in the last of the fourth to take the lead.

The teams traded a run apiece in the fifth inning with Thomas going in for the San Diegos. The Padres made a final bid in the eighth inning with two runs but were one tally shy of tying up the game again.

Suds, Seals Split

SEATTLE, Sept. 12.—(AP)—San Francisco bounced Seattle out of its precarious Pacific Coast league lead Thursday night by routing the Rainiers 9 to 1 in the second game of a doubleheader after Seattle took the first 10 to 3.

A big third inning settled the second game as the Seals scored six times on four hits and four walks. Three of the walks were off young Dewey Soriano before he gave way to Paul Gregory on the mound.

Seattle won the first game with an outburst of power at the plate.

McAdams Earns Team Place

PRINCETON, N.J., Sept. 12.—(AP)—Three rookies, all of whom joined the team after training was well under way, have earned starting berths with the Brooklyn Football Dodgers Coach Jack Sutherland announced Friday.

They are Dean McAdams, halfback from the University of Washington, Eddie Rucinski, end from Indiana, and Warren Alfston, husky guard from Nebraska. All were members of the Chicago All-Star team that played against the Chicago Bears.

Mrs. Newell, Miss Sigel in Golfing Final

BROOKLINE, Mass., Sept. 12.—(AP)—Just when it appeared that Mrs. Betty Hicks Newell of Long Beach, Calif., couldn't sink a putt longer than a foot, she regained her touch Friday and entered the final round of the Women's National Amateur golf championship by out-battling Mrs. Estelle Lawson Page of Greensboro, N.C., for a 19-hole triumph.

For the first time in five years the title competition wound up at the Country club in an east-west final as Helen Sigel of Philadelphia, defeated Mrs. Frank Goldthwaite of Fort Worth, Tex., 3 and 2, in the other semi-final match.

All through her match, Mrs. Newell missed all sorts of putts at vital stages, probably because she was saving her best one, a 15-footer, to square the match with a par-four on the 18th green. Then she cut loose with two beautiful woods and, while putting from 30 feet, missed an eagle three by inches, before she clinched her overtime victory.

Mrs. Page, the 1937 victor and a semi-finalist in three of the last five championships, was short with her second on the 19th and then was unable to sink a seven-footer after chipping on. The southern Star played the 18th in that same fashion to surrender the lead, which totaled two holes at the seventh.

Miss Sigel, making her fifth title bid, was aided by several fortunate breaks before she eliminated the other southern claimant.

Cards Edge 4-3 Win

Come From Behind in 2nd Crucial Game; Veterans Rally to Beat Dodgers

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 12.—(AP)—The St. Louis Cardinals squeezed out a 4 to 3 victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers Friday, with the help of a pair of triples by the two oldest men on the team, and crowded back within a game of the National league lead.

The Redbirds are famous far and wide as a collection of youngsters, fast and reckless, and they banked on youth in starting a 20-year-old rookie, Howard Pollett, in Friday's second chapter of the critical three-game series.

But it was too hoary veterans, 35-year-old Gus Mancuso and 37-year-old Estel Crabtree, who crashed through to glory when their backs were against the wall. Mancuso, the crafty catcher, smashed a three-bagger into center field in the second inning to drive home St. Louis' first run and then scored himself on a single by Pollett.

And after the Dodgers had forged in front in the fifth on three runs, the amazing Crabtree, who was forbidden to play baseball by his physician because of a kidney operation last year, sparked the Cards to two more runs with a triple in the sixth.

This winning rally started with Curt Davis walking Don Padgett, Johnny Mize hit a harmless fly and then Crabtree rifled a terrific drive against the edge of the pavilion roof in rightfield and came rushing home a moment later on a fly to left by Frank "Creepy" Crespi.

The second game of this bitterly-fought series for leadership of the senior circuit was just as tight and just as thrilling as Thursday's struggle which the Dodgers captured 6 to 4 in 11 innings and the crowd of 17,953, slightly smaller than the first turnout, got a full measure of heartbreaks and heroics.

The terrific pressure which burdened both teams equally Thursday was concentrated on the Cardinals Friday and they showed it by making four errors to Brooklyn's one. They also were out-hit by the Dodgers, 9 to 6.

Two of these misplays, both by Leftfielder Don Padgett, helped the Dodgers to their three-run spurge in the fifth.

Pollett, southpaw sensation of the Texas league until the Cards' recalled him last month from their Houston farm, was removed in the next inning after he walked the first batter and Max Lanier, another left-hander, came onto the scene to give a grand relief performance and get credit for the victory.

He gave up only one hit in the four innings he labored and received great defensive cooperation from his teammates, who steadied unbelievably after their early lapses.

In the sixth when Mickey Owen, who had been walked by Pollett, tried to score from second on a single to right by Herman, Crabtree made a picture throw to the plate to enable Mancuso to block off the run.

Friday's triumph gave the Cards an 11-10 edge in their season's series with the Dodgers and left open the possibility of their regaining the league lead by two percentage points if they should win Saturday's finale in which Mort Cooper is slated to face Whitlow Wyatt.

Brooklyn 3 9 1
St. Louis 4 6 4
Davis, Casey (8) and Owen; Pollett, Lanier (6) and Mancuso.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—(AP)—The champion New York Yankees raided three Detroit pitchers for 13 hits Friday to overpower the Tigers 8 to 2 after learning that Stugger Charley Keller would be lost for the rest of the year because of an injury Thursday.

The Yankee bombardment was concentrated for five runs in the fourth inning, when Frank Crosetti singled with the bases loaded for a pair of runs and Joe DiMaggio drove in two more with a double.

Tacoma Pitcher Called on Option

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 17.—(AP)—Offices of the San Francisco baseball club announced Friday Milt Cadhina and Chet Johnson, young pitchers out on option, had been instructed to report to the Seals in Seattle immediately.

They are expected to take up the slack caused by the loss of Larry Janzen, star moundman afflicted with the mumps and apparently out for the balance of the season.

Cadhina was farmed out to Tacoma where he established a record of 13 wins and 16 defeats. Johnson, a left hander, won 17 and lost 12 for Bakersfield this season.

Washington Is Champ, Say Some; Phelan Waits Until Minnesota

SEATTLE, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Some of the experts, east and west, have been picking the University of Washington as this year's Pacific Coast conference football champion.

But to hear Coach Jimmy Phelan tell about it, he'll collide with Minnesota's traditionally strong club here September 27 with only nine-elevenths of a football team.

"We need ends and right halfbacks," the graying Irishman insists. But he's pretty well satisfied with the rest of the outfit, which may be indicative, as Phelan seldom is inattentive.

Phelan has one outstanding end—Earl Younglove of Ferria, Ill., who is tabbed as one of Washington's two potential all-American line candidates this fall. Younglove is a sturdy, long-armed, hard-hitting wingman who can play on either extremity but who probably will start at left end.

After Younglove, though, Phelan will tell you the material is pretty thin. However, it is to be recalled Phelan has developed a long string of outstanding ends—Bill Smith, Snakebite Nisbet, Dick Johnson, Bill Johnson, Bill Marx and Jay MacDowell being some of them. And, too, an end who wasn't even on the program caught a touchdown pass against Oregon last year, and that griddler, Bob Vaughan, is back.

All Washington has to do at right half is replace triple-threat-er Dean McAdams, now with the pros. One candidate, Maurice Stacey, was called into the navy as an ensign. There's 180-pound Dwight "Spider" Smith being groomed for the job, principally because he's a junior and Phelan dislikes to designate sophs as starters.

But he's got some fine soph material for the post in Bob Barrett, 192 pounds, Milt Hansberry, 192, and Johnny Norton, 188. All of them, Smith through Norton, are Seattleites, the Chicago athletic pipeline being plugged principally by the Atherton code.

Walt Harrison, a plunging full-back last year, will center the ball this season, making the same switch as his predecessor, the graduated Rudy Mucha.

Guards and tackles are big, husky and plentiful. Chief among them is Ray Frankowski of Hammond, Ind., all coast-guard last year and who is figured as an all-American possibility this year. Ray reported overweight.

Where Washington winds up depends chiefly on what happens in the Minnesota opener. On previous occasions the Gophers have administered Washington such a physical beating that it took several weeks for the Huskies to return to stride.

After Minnesota, Washington plays Oregon State and Washington State on the road, UCLA, Stanford and Montana at home, California at Berkeley, Oregon here and southern California at Los Angeles.

Par Is Battered At Atlantic City; Mangrum 7 Under

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J., Sept. 12.—(AP)—Old man par was given a thorough going-over Friday in the first round of the $5000 greater Atlantic City open golf tournament at the country club of Atlantic City.

Lloyd Mangrum, the slender slugger from Monterey Beach, Calif., set the pace with a seven-under-par 65, but he couldn't gain enough of a lead to take any chances during the next three days. Only a stroke behind him came Horton Smith, the Pinehurst, N.C., veteran, and three others were only two strokes back.

In all, twenty of the nation's leading pros came in under the par figure of 72 and five others, including amateurs William Hyndman of Philadelphia and James "Sonny" Fraser of Atlantic City, equaled par.

Another 18 holes is scheduled for Saturday with the final 36 on Sunday.

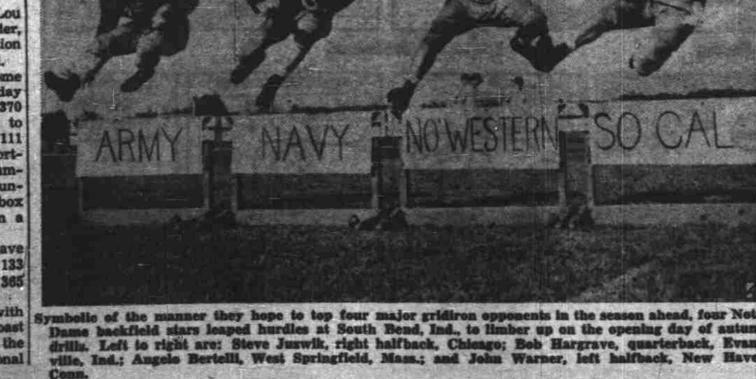

Jenkins Halts Ohio Battler

MINNEAPOLIS, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Lew Jenkins, Sweetwater, Texas, recognized in some states as lightweight boxing champion, swarmed all over Cleo McNeal, Akron, Ohio, negro, to knock him out in the third round of a scheduled ten-round fight Friday night.

It was a non-title match. Jenkins weighed 133, McNeal 139.

The Texas swarmer floored McNeal three times, all with left hand off in two minutes of the hooks to the jaw, before polishing third round.
