

Two Poultry Meets Set This Month

Two meetings involving Oregon poultrymen have recently been announced for October.

On the 15th of this month a one-day course of instruction on the field test for pullorum disease in chickens will be given at Oregon State college, at the request of the state department of agriculture.

The session will start at 10 o'clock and is open, with the payment of a registration fee, to all those interested in complying with regulations for shipment of baby chicks and hatching eggs into certain states, and for those desiring training for participation in the program of the Oregon Poultry Improvement association.

The second meeting is the annual two-day fall session of the Oregon Baby Chick association and will be held in the Oregon City high school October 21 and 22, starting at 10 o'clock each day. The first day's meeting is limited to members or prospective members of the association. The program on the second day is open to the public and is arranged to be of benefit particularly to flock owners producing hatching eggs.

Fred Cockell, Milwaukie, newly elected president of the International Baby Chick association, will be among the speakers, as will representatives of Oregon State college and others.

Oregon will be represented in the fifth national 4H dairy production demonstration contest at the National Dairy show, Memphis, Tenn., October 11-13, by Virginia and Gerald Bauer, ages 19 and 18, of Neskowin, Tillamook county. As dairying and cheese production are the most important industries in their county, their state-winning demonstration emphasized how to keep a milking machine clean and sanitary. They were coached by Robert Vogel, their club leader. Transportation and other expenses to Memphis are provided the team through the Kraft Cheese company, which also appropriates $2800 in college scholarships for the eight highest scoring pairs in the finals.
