AP CHARTER MEMBERS LOOK BACK—and AHEAD!

In connection with the anniversary of the last reorganization of The Associated Press-in September, 1900-the following telegrams were received at AP's general office in New York from charter members who have held memberships continuously for 41 years or more:

GEORGE F. BOOTH, THE WORCES-TER (MASS.) TELEGRAM AND GAZETTE-member since TER (MASS.) TELEGRAM AND GAZETTE—member since 1897—"The Associated Press has always been the accurate unbiased reporter of news events. Its field has grown until it covers the world and is recognized at home and abroad as the authoritative source of correct information. It has competitors, but no rivalst Other press associations supplement it, but could not replace it. To maintain this reliability while taking advantage of every scientific development that can speed or improve its report is the objective."

W. H. COWLES, THE SPOKANE (WASH.) SPOKESMAN REVIEW—member since 1893— "That I was a charter member of The Associated Press as reorgan-Inat I was a charter member of The Associated Press as reorgan-ized in 1900 makes me very proud. This cooperative news service controlled by 1,400 newspapers of all political and religious views has guaranteed an honest and unbiased news service for all the people. Its value cannot be overestimated. We should all pray that its record continue indefinitely as high minded in serving the public as it is now."

JAMES M. COX, THE DAYTON

(O.) NEWS—member since 1894—"In these times, there is nothing more important than truth in the news as reported. It is the first essential to an informed public opinion. In the past, The Associated Press has met such a challenge by maintaining a traditional good faith with the public and keeping itself free from the temptation to be enterprising, rather than careful. It will do so again, and that's why it has lived as an institution of great service. Its major asset is the widespread confidence it holds."

JOSEPHUS DANIELS, THE RALEIGH (N. C.) NEWS AND OBSERVER—member since 1895—
Thave been privileged in 41 years of membership in The Associated Press to witness what has been truly an evolution and revolution in the collection and dissemination of the news of the world. In 1900, the men of vision who fashioned the policies of the organization planned better than they knew, step by step. They have made peoples in all parts of the world near neighbors."

HOMER GARD, THE HAMILTON (O.) JOURNAL-NEWS—member since 1895—"As I review my newspaper life, my association with The Associated Press has been an outstanding pleasure. The Associated Press has progressed through the years because of a sound business policy, its impartiality in handling news, its aggressive gathering of news, its desire for truthfulness and dependability in news. I can see no special change necessary for the continued usefulness and success of The Associated Press."

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST, THE
SAN FRANCISCO (CALIF.) EXAMINER—member since 1894—T cannot conceive of any better plan than the one The Associated, Press has been following for forty years—namely, provide all the news and keep free from political partisanship."

JOHN DAY JACKSON, THE NEW HAVEN (CONN.) REGISTER—member since 1897—"The expansion of the service and the efficiency of The Associated Press since reorganization is a most remarkable development in journalistic effort, including as it does, features, photos, literary crinicism, comics, news interpretation and special correspondence, thus meeting requirements not hitherto attempted. I believe, however, its future lies in an even greater expansion of its purely news coverage, excellent as that already it."

A. N. LIECTY, THE SCHENECTADY, ON. Y.) GAZETTE—member since 1899—"Heariest congratulations on the steady and satisfactory progrets of The Associated Press which calls for the highest praise from its members. Believe this progress will continue until your service will be so comprehensive as to fill every need of the publisher outside of the local and editorial content of his newspaper."

F. A. MILLER, THE SOUTH BEND (IND.) TRIBUNE-member since 1898-"The Associated Press, living up to its reputation as the greatest news gathering and news distributing organization in the world, has made remarkable progress from its inception. Its expansion in the last comparatively. few years has made its service more and more valuable to the people until its name has become a household word meaning accuracy and dependableness in news presentation."

KELTON B. MILLER, THE PITTS-FIELD (MASS.) BERKSHIRE EAGLE-member since 1896 -"My AP memories go back to when country editor members did some real shacking over big territory, without benefit of telephones, automobiles, good roads. Our early lovalty was not wasted, but has been foundation for present magnificent organization, which makes free press possible. If we hold to our record of fairness, imparti-ality and complete coverage, the future holds no fears."

F. B. NICHOLS, THE BATH (ME.) TIMES—member since 1898—"Congratulate AP on marked im-provement in service—notably, in increased human interest, accuracy, completeness and timely photos. Now so good one has difficulty in discovering further room for improvement. Am appreciable of privilege and of honor membership in organization. Still taking pride in unbiased report of all the world's news at reasonable cost. A wonderful example of cooperative effort."

TON (D. C.) EVENING STAR-member since 1894-"I am most gratified that with all its physical growth and change The Associated Press still can and does adhere to its founding principles, and my deep conviction is that this will always be the case as long as the association lives," WILLIAM H. OAT, THE NORWICH

(CONN.) BULLETIN—member since 1897—'If The Associated Press services advance as much in the next 41 years as in the past 41 years, one will be unable now to understand what they will include. Forty-one years ago, an Associated Press operator took a few thousand words a day and some operators went crazy counting the dots and dashes. Now the automatic printers work continuously 24 hours every day and cover the news of the world."

(WASH.) OLYMPIAN—member since 1900—"In all the forty-one years that I have been a member of The Associated Press, we have always had a progressive management backed up by an intelligent and unselfish directorate, and today with its conservative management and its world-wide service it is supreme in its field and

W. H. SAMMONS, THE SIOUX CITY (In.) JOURNAL—member since 1694—'Proud of being a charter member of The Associated Press, The Sioux City Journal enthusiastically sends anniversary felicitations to the good old AP. Always forward looking, enterprising, progressive, up with (or shead of) the times and, above all, dependable, never having lost sight of its main job of gathering the news of the world and getting it to member papers—accurate, readable and first."

J. C. SEACREST, THE LINCOLN (NEB.) NEBRASKA STATE JOURNAL—member since 1897, —The Associated Press will advance and develop. That development will be directed by the requirements of those served and the trend of change. The AP is the greatest agency of a free preis and the valued servant of a free people."

GEORGE W. WOOD, THE LEWISTON (ME.) SUNsince 1893—by L. B. Costello)—"As he looks back 41 years to the very limited newly coverage which he received from The Associated Press in 1900, he is amazed at the splendid progress which has been made and the wonderful national and world coverage he is now getting. In all this time, he has depended solely on The Associated Press for his general newly
