

Indians Object to the Draft

Members of six Indian tribes appeared in federal court in New York protesting against the government drafting members of the Iroquois Confederacy into the army. To do so, declared counsel for the Indians, would be a flagrant violation of the treaty of 1784 between the U. S. and the Iroquois Confederacy. Counsel for the Indians argued that the Confederacy is an independent, unconquered nation, subject to its own lawmakers. Attorney Wilfred E. Hoffman is pictured with Harry Patterson, left, of the Tuscarora tribe and Ivan A. Burnham of the Mohawk tribe.

$11,000,000 Air Field Ready For Operation—Except Planes

McCHORD FIELD, Oct. 25—(AP)—This $11,000,000 army air base, the largest in the Pacific northwest, paradoxically lacks only one type of equipment necessary for its operation—some planes.

McChord Field lost most of its planes early this summer when the old 17th bombing group was split three ways. The parent organization went to Pendleton, the 47th to Fresno, and the 12th remained here.

But the 12th bombing group, designated as one of the air corps' new light attack forces, has no planes. The group is supposed to be equipped with the fast new B-24-B's, which are being produced at the Boeing plant in Seattle.

Air corps officials say the planes are coming to McChord all right, but only for the ferry command to Britain. They leave immediately as Britain's famous and favorite DB-7's—known as a light attack bomber.

Col. William H. Crom, field commander, said Saturday McChord would see some activity during the coming air maneuvers in the Pacific northwest, October 27, when a pursuit squadron and a bombing group are located on the field for several days of the exercise.

All activity will center in Seattle, however, Col. Crom continued and the field's only duty during the stay will be to feed and house the men.

Most of the 2500 men at McChord are engaged in keeping a few out-dated B-18's in the air, and preparing the field for a future date when it will be one of the busiest in the northwest.

Troops of the 44th base group can be seen from the state highway, practicing with camouflaged anti-aircraft batteries (machine guns covered with foliage, and other phases of field training.

Men are being sent home after serving a year in the air corps if they are 28 years or over, and the ranks are being filled with semi-trained recruits from eastern replacement centers.

The field soon will see the start of an administration building—a two-story affair with a basement, to be located across the street from the present barracks building, now being used partly as a headquarters. Contract bids are being called on the brick and concrete structure now.

The paving projects are continuing at the field with contract labor and soon will provide streets and roadways sufficient for the traffic of a busy army air base.

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 25—(AP)—Private Leroy Walter Craig, 20-year-old 15th infantryman from Fort Lewis, Wash., was designated Saturday as this week's unluckiest soldier.

By virtue of that designation he attended the football game between the University of California at Los Angeles and the University of Oregon in the company of Miss Esther Ames, Pasadena junior college co-ed. Tickets are provided by Preston Foster, Paramount motion

Craig's selection came because he lost his brief case containing not only the money for a return ticket to Fort Lewis and $10 extra, but the telephone number of a girl he met at a USO dance and on whom he planned to spend the extra ten.

MONMOUTH — Jack Wienert, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Wienert of Airie, a second lieutenant in the army air corps, is spending a short furlough at home. He has recently been stationed at Savannah, Ga., but has received orders to report at the Presidio, San Francisco, Monday. He was graduated from Monmouth high school and was one of Oregon State college's freshman baseball men prior to his enlistment.
