Nazis Hitting Harder On Two Fronts; Japan Border Clash Told

than the immediate present, giving nothing new of consequence as to the existing fighting areas but asserting that there had been "a sharp deterioration in the physical condition and morale" of the invaders, who were said to be approaching exhaustion.

Kulbyshev reported that coal production in the Kuznets basin in Siberia, most vital now that the Donets basin is a battlefield, had been sharply increased; that the production of iron ore, manganese and non-ferrous metals in Kuznets was up 40 per cent over peacetime; that factories evacuated from the Moscow area already were in operation in the Urals.

The day brought also an indication, quite small in itself and one that might in the end turn out to have been of little consequence, of possible difficulty for the soviet on the eastern flank facing Japan. The official Russian news agency Tass circulated a report—of which Japanese officials in Shanghai disclaimed knowledge—that 20 Japanese soldiers had made a raid across the Russian Far Eastern frontier four days ago and that they were driven back after a clash with red patrols, some casualties resulting.

The possible significance of this was not in the incident itself—there have been many such—but rather in its timing. The Japanese government has closely followed the course of the German invasion of Russia; certain military and similar personalities in Tokyo have been urging that Japan attack the soviet union from the east if and when her armies collapse in the west.

It was from Russian rather than German sources that the principal information came Monday concerning the offensives upon Moscow. A German advance of some 15 miles beyond Maloyaroslavl, an area of weeks of fighting, to 50 miles below the capital was acknowledged in soviet military dispatches, which reported that at that point red counter-attacks beat the invaders back across the Nara river.

It appeared that Serpukhov, a city of 77,000, stood near the core of this heavy new action—the most violent of a day that saw a sharp rise in the tempo of fighting all about Moscow. The Russian left wing in that area was acknowledged to be under attack of terrible power, and soviet dispatches conceded that about Moscow generally the Germans were bringing up tens of thousands of reinforcements.

Fighting was reported still in heavy progress about Maloyaroslavl itself, and thus the situation appeared one of a German salient extended to a depth of 15 miles—to a point at or near the confluence of the Narva and Oka rivers.

The supreme commander of the Moscow armies, General Gregory K. Zhukov, directed his troops to die before giving more ground, thus ordering them:

"Not a step back! Halt the fascist! Don't let them reach Moscow!
"Every man must fight like a lion!"

As to the Ukraine, the Russians said little of today, beyond acknowledging that the situation was most critical and that the axis was striking powerfully at the approaches to Rostov, the Don river city, and also down upon the Crimean peninsula to the west. The Germans, claiming that the Russians were suffering "heavy and bloody casualties" in fruitless counter-attacks, handed to foreign correspondents background material on Rostov similar to that given out before the recently claimed capture of Khar'kov to the northwest. This was their oblique way of asserting that they would soon have Rostov in hand.

Berlin also went out of its way to praise its allies in the Ukraine—the Italians, of whose military exploits the nazis rarely make mention. This presumably had something to do with the fact that the Italian foreign minister had been talking to Adolf Hitler at his Russian headquarters.

London reported Monday night more indications that British Middle Eastern armies—which by many indications would move against the Germans if they broke into the Caucasus—might in the end have to try to break as well dual nazi thrusts toward the Suez canal. Such a thrust might develop, said one informed source, should Hitler be able to seize the whole of the Crimea and the north shores of the Black sea.

In such an event, this informant added, he was likely to smash through Turkey toward the Suez with one column from Russia while another axis column struck eastward from Italian Libya. In connection with this rising British concern over the Middle East, home dispatches reported that Haj Amin Effendi Al Hussein, the exiled anti-British grand mufti of Jerusalem had taken up residence in Italy to carry on from there his efforts to stir up the Moslems against the British and in aid of the axis.

The Germans suspended indefinitely Monday night the scheduled execution of 100 more French hostages—50 of them having been held for the assassination of a Nazi officer in Nantes and the others for a similar assassination in Bordeaux—some 48 hours after President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill had denounced before the world such wholesale blood-letting.

In Oslje, near the Hungarian frontier in Croatia, 15 persons also called communists—two of them women—were executed.

Broach had been employed in various capacities here. Mrs. Bowden, employed as a waitress, is survived by a small son, Donald Lloyd; mother, Mrs. Alice Siewert; brothers, Robert and Charles Siewert, all of Salem. Funeral services are to be Wednesday at 10 a. m. from the Clough-Barrick chapel, with burial in Belcrest Memorial park.

Remainder of the mishaps reported were within Salem. Autos driven by Napoleon E. Vanover, Salem route two, and Jacob E. Vanlydegraf, 1225 North Summer street, crashed about 6 a. m. Sunday at Capitol and Chemeketa streets.

Although two soldiers given a ride in the Vanover vehicle were not hurt, the five other occupants were, none seriously, and were treated by the first aid car and taken to the hospital. Besides the driver, the injured were Earl Ruschel, 1855 North Commercial street; John Thurston, Silverton route two; Mrs. Anna Marshall and daughter, Charlotte, both of Modern Court, West Salem. Vanlydegraf said his arm and back were sore, but his son Earl was not hurt.

Sunday's other accidents here included: Harold J. Kelly of Portland struck a tree at 1854 North Capitol street.

William T. Hook, Mt. Angel route one, and Don Millican, Willamina route one, collided at Center and Capitol streets. Millican was arrested on a charge of having no operator's license.

Gail Roy Eshell, Salem route seven, and William Lee Skipton, 1196 Marion street, collided at Marion and Liberty streets.

BANKS, Oct. 27—(P)—Fourteen automobiles were strewn along the Wolf creek highway near here Sunday night, the result of a quick stop by one car.

be relayed to such notification points as that maintained at the Salem police station on the night of October 31, when the week's maneuvers are climaxed in night raids and a western Oregon black-out.

Army men stationed in Salem for the maneuvers rested Sunday and Monday, expecting to be on the alert all day today for orders to join in pursuit of the bombers expected to swoop down from their Washington bases.

Low ceiling and rains make the program for the week extra hazardous, it was declared here Monday as youthful pilots of the 54th, 38th and 37th squadrons prepared to "protect" the territory with which they have become acquainted during the past week.

Fourteen army planes were at the Salem airport Monday night, one of them an advanced trainer, the others pursuit ships.

Except for the cooperation of civilian defense observers, activities during actual maneuvers today and through Thursday probably will be similar to those of the past week. Lt. T. W. Jackson, officer in command in Salem, said Monday. However, fliers will be graded by umpires according to specified rules of the "game."

Friday's night attacks, with flares promised by bombers for blacked out cities (unless interceptor planes are successful in driving off all "attackers"), are to find the mid-Willamette valley organized for assistance, Bryan H. Conley, Marion county civilian defense coordinator, declared Monday night.

Directions for blackout are to go out over Salem police and radio station KSLM broadcasts to communication centers at Canby, Aurora, Woodburn, Molalla, Mt. Angel, Silverton, Stayton, Mill City, Seia, Turner, Jefferson, West Salem, Independence, Monmouth, Dallas, Buell, Amity, Dayton, Brooks, Gervais and St. Paul.

Industries have been asked to darken windows and use as few lights as possible; residences to turn out outside lights, darken windows and so far as possible go without light during the 15 minutes of the blackout. In Salem alone 859 ARP wardens have been named to check conditions in order to make sure that all persons have received the notification.

All homeville substations will be darkened by use of window coverings, flashlights with muffled beams and as few lights as possible during the blackout, civilian defense authorities have been notified.

A special appeal is going out through Salem schools for the cooperation of pupils in the Halloween activity.

Lt. C. E. Heltz, pilot removed to a Portland hospital from Salem late last week, has left the hospital and is reported recovered, it was said at fairgrounds headquarters here Monday.

Funeral Set For Resident

Funeral services for Gustave E. Schuneman, resident of Salem since 1916, who died Thursday, are to be Thursday at 10 a. m. at St. Joseph's Catholic church. Burial is to be in Belcrest Memorial park in charge of the W. T. Rigdon company.

Schuneman was born in Columbus, Wis., in 1869 and came to Portland in 1910. He traveled for Wadham and Kerr Bros. wholesale grocers and Kerr Conserving company until 1931.

Surviving are the widow, M. Agnes Schuneman; brother W. H. Schuneman of Columbia, Tenn.; nieces, Louise Schuneman, Wilson of Memphis, Tenn., and Florence Schuneman Richardson of Salt Lake City.

He was a member of the Salem Elks lodge.

Mine Workers to authorize an immediate resumption of mining.

"Whatever may be the issues between you and Mr. Taylor or you and Mr. Morgan, the large question of adequate fuel supply is of greater interest and import to the national welfare. There is every reason for the continuance of negotiations. There is no reason for stoppage of work."

NEW YORK, Oct. 27—(AP)—J. P. Morgan tonight characterized as "utter rubbish" the various charges against him contained in the letter of John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, to President Roosevelt, rejecting the latter's plea to keep the captive coal mines in operation.

The international banker authorized this statement over the telephone:

"True, I am one of the directors of the United States Steel Corp., but every other statement about me in Mr. Lewis' letter is untrue."

may seem to appear as harmless entertainment, experience has proven that these games lead to petty gambling among the young people of our community and consequently serve as an educational agency in gambling.

"That this ordinance as a revenue measure takes the money from boys and girls, soldiers and others without adequate income.

"That the proper policing of such devices will entail a larger police force and a greater expense to the community.

"That the failure to enforce this ordinance as already demonstrated in the case of slot machines in our community will result in additional law breaking and a return to the general practice of gambling among youth.

"That this measure is being instigated by a small group of interested citizens who will profit by it and is not representative of the will of the majority of Salem who desire to maintain a clean standard of public morals.

"That to meet the national emergency we need to safeguard rather than to weaken public morals."

Blaze Destroys Monmouth Home

MONMOUTH, Oct. 27—Fire from an overheated stove completely razed the home of Mrs. Edith Duncan at the corner of College and Jackson streets early Monday afternoon. Only a little bedding and clothing was saved.

Mrs. E. D. White, 82, a tenant on the second floor, attempted to escape the flames by tying sheets together, but the fire department arrived in time for Fire Chief Edward Reedy to rescue her with a ladder.

About $500 insurance was carried on the house itself, but none on the furnishings.

Pinball Bill Joker Is Seen

Repeal of Gambling House Ban Found in Proposed Measure

opposition to the proposed pinball bill at a meeting of the Salem Ministerial association Monday morning, declared in the words of one of their number, that it was "too bad" they had not had the repeal "joker" pointed out to them while they were planning a forthcoming protest audience at next Monday night's council meeting.

This is the section of the 17-year-old ordinance "on public morals and decency," to quote its title, that would be repealed by the "pinball" bill which is scheduled for final consideration by the council that night:

"Section 1. GAMBLING HOUSES. It shall be unlawful to open, set up, keep, frequent, enter, or visit any gaming or gambling house or place where any banking or other game is played with cards, dice, machine, buttons, or any other device for anything of value, whether the same is played for money, checks, credits, or any other representation of value, excepting therefrom machines of any kind, character, or description in which, on deposit of a five-cent piece, or other piece of money, certain services are rendered therefor, or articles of merchandise other than money are given in consideration thereof."

This 17-year-old ordinance, of which the above is one of 17 sections, has only once been liberalized—in 1937, when the council modified section 3, subdivision 3, to "legalize" merchandise punchboards. But last May this provision was rescinded and punchboards in any form were again banned.

Several city councils have seen fit, on the other hand, to make the old gambling ordinance more stringent, particularly as it has applied to devices capable of being used for gambling purposes.

The other section of the 17-year-old anti-gambling ordinance which advocates of the new proposal would throw out reads:

"Section 3-2. MARBLE, PINBALL, DART GAMES. That it shall be unlawful for any person to set up, conduct, maintain, operate, keep, or have in possession or to manufacture, sell, or distribute, either as owner, lessee, employee, or agent, or to play or use, within the city of Salem, any pinball game, marble game, dart game, or other game, device or machine the playing or operation of which involves an element of skill as well as an element of chance."

This is the section which a disgruntled city council inserted in the city's old standby ordinance against gambling after its authority had been flouted by dart game operators in 1935 and after earlier efforts to license

The God of blood and iron will take the place of the God of Love and Mercy. . . .

Very simply and very bluntly—we are pledged to pull our own oar in the destruction of Hitlerism. . . .

And when we have helped to end the curse of Hitlerism we shall help to establish a new peace which will give to decent people everywhere a better chance to live and prosper in security and in freedom and in faith. . . .

It is the nation's will that America shall deliver the goods. In open defiance of that will, our ships have been sunk and our sailors have been killed. I say that we do not propose to take this lying down. . . .

Our output must be multiplied. It cannot be hampered by the selfish obstruction of a small but dangerous minority of industrial managers who hold out for extra profits, or for "business as usual." Roosevelt Declares First Objective to Defeat Hitlerism would be substituted, and the words of Hitler's "Mein Kampf" would replace the Bible.

"The God of blood and iron," Mr. Roosevelt asserted, "will take the place of the God of Love and Mercy."

The chief executive went back over a bit of recent history since he proclaimed five months ago tonight the existence of a state of unlimited emergency. He recalled the sinking of American-owned merchant ships, the attack on the American destroyer Greer on September 4, and the torpedoing of the destroyer Kearny on October 17.

"We have wished to avoid shooting," the president said, "but the shooting has started. And history has recorded who fired the first shot. In the long run, however, all that will matter is who fired the last shot."

"America has been attacked. The USS Kearny is not just a navy ship. She belongs to every man, woman, and child in this nation. . . .

"Hitler's torpedo was directed at every American, whether he lives on our sea coasts or in the innermost part of the nation, far from the seas and far from the guns and tanks of the marching hordes of would-be conquerors of the world. "The purpose of Hitler's attack was to frighten the American people off the high seas—to force us to make a trembling retreat. This is not the first time he has misled the American spirit. That spirit is now aroused."

The president remarked that if American policy were to be dominated by the fear of shooting, all our ships and all those of our sister republics would have to be tied up in home harbors and our navy remain abjectly behind the Hitler-decreed line on any ocean.

Proclaiming that freedom of the seas is and always has been a fundamental policy of the American government, Mr. Roosevelt declared that "naturally we reject that absurd and insulting suggestion."

Bluntly, Mr. Roosevelt declared that the forward march of Hitlerism could and would be stopped. "Very simply and very bluntly," he added, "we are pledged to pull our own oar in the destruction of Hitlerism."

He said that each passing day brought a greater arms production for warriors on the actual battlefronts. And it is the nation's will, he added, that these vital arms and supplies shall not be locked in American harbors nor sent to the bottom of the ocean.

"It is the nation's will," the president added, "that America shall deliver the goods. In open defiance of that will, our ships have been sunk and our sailors have been killed."

"I say that we do not propose to take this lying down. "Our determination not to take it lying down has been expressed in the orders to the American navy to shoot on sight. Those orders stand."

Mr. Roosevelt made but a single and indirect reference to defense strikes, mentioning no dispute specifically nor any individuals by name.

The reference was in one brief paragraph, which followed a declaration that defense output must be multiplied. He said:

"It can not be hampered by the selfish obstruction of a small but dangerous minority of industrial managers who hold out for extra profits, or for 'business as usual.' It can not be hampered by the selfish obstruction of a small but dangerous minority of labor leaders who are a menace to the true cause of labor itself, as well as to the nation as a whole."

While Mr. Roosevelt spoke, America's mighty fleet was observing Navy day in gala celebrations in port or on grim duty at sea.

would like to see us involved in the war."

Senator Glass (D-Va)—"I don't know how many votes the president's address will affect, but I know that I am going to vote for the bill which gives our ships the freedom of the seas."

Rep. Luther A. Johnson (D-Tex)—"It was calculated to arouse the patriotic fervor of the American people more than any speech he has yet delivered and to intensify the determination of the American people that Hitler shall be destroyed."

Chairman Bloom (D-NY) of the house foreign affairs committee—"The president expressed the views and hopes of the majority of the American people."
