Service Men

Where They Are What They're Doing

Observance of "Marine Corps day," November 10, was urged by Gov. Charles A. Sprague in a statement released here Wednesday.

"The marine corps has a long and honorable career," Gov. Sprague said, "and commands respect wherever its force appears."

A conference of Astoria citizens, Col. Elmer V. Wooton, acting adjutant general, and a federal official, in connection with the proposed new Astoria armory, is scheduled for later this week, probably in Portland.

The plan proposes that the federal government shall contribute $65,000, the state $40,000, Clatsop county $25,000 and Astoria a site valued at $15,000.

FORT LEWIS, Nov. 5—(AP)—Among 16 reserve officers from Pacific northwest cities now doing a tour of duty with the 41st division notified they will remain for another year in active service were:

218th field artillery: Lieuts. Harold Alexander Thomas, Salem; Gilbert George Erlanson, Parkdale, Ore.

146th field artillery: Lieuts. Albert Edwin Oppenweyer, Hillsboro, Ore.; William Bovell Morse, Corvallis.

FORT LEWIS, Nov. 5—(AP)—An undisciplined number of new 30-ton tanks were unloaded from railroad cars Tuesday and Wednesday for use by the 752nd tank battalion.

Equipped with 75 mm cannon, several 37 mm rifles and rapid fire machine guns, the tanks are the product of an eastern automobile firm and are considered by military authorities to be the most effective combination fire power and armor ever constructed.

Lieut. Col. G. H. Anderson, commander of the battalion, said Wednesday he was not at liberty to announce the number of tanks arriving this week, but that he soon expected the 752nd to have its full quota of 54 machines.

Col. Anderson said his troops probably soon would launch into a new phase of field training which would consist of assault methods by glide bombers in cooperation with the tanks. The bombers would come from nearby McChord field, he added.

Since the battalion's activation this summer with troops trained in the armored forces at Fort Knox, Ky., the outfit has used out-moded light tanks weighing about 22 tons for field practice.
