

Huskies' Seniors Vow To Whip Ducks Again

Sport Sparks

By RON GEMMELL

"So you are Superman, eh?" jibed the Salem high gridders at Everett's Larry Hatch in Thursday's football fust here. "That's right," came back Hatch, and forthwith proceeded to run right over the Vixs. Standing with hands on hips in the middle of the line, Sampson, Everett center, would survey the Viking line, a big grin on his mug all the time, and say: "So this is Salem." Then, bang! Mickey Barnes, the low-running, hard-driving little 155-pound fullback, would slam through the center like a shot out of a cannon.

They rubbed it in, those cocky Everett kids, who seemed to be very much in love with the game of football, but well they might for they were really good. Best prep team your correspondent has seen in four seasons... Weak in some departments, yes — as in the punting department — but on the whole a very classy high school outfit which knew what it was about all the time.

Hatch adequately lived up to advance notices by passing for 14 points, running for 12 more and kicking one, but the 165-pound halfback had fine help from a line that knew how to charge low and to make blocks stick and from pass receivers who were adept at feinting defenders out of the way. The 17-year-old Hatch, who undoubtedly will add another 15 pounds in the next two years, should have a college football future.

No Disgrace

While Coach Harold Hawk's team was pretty badly outclassed by the Everetts, so have been some other better than fair ball clubs, and the whipping most certainly isn't any disgrace. Actually, the Vik club's record of six wins in nine games this season is considerably better than could have been expected of the green outfit which began the schedule. It must be remembered that End Rollie Haag was the only returning regular from last year's line, and that Halfbacks Dutch Simmons and Rex Hardy were the only returning backfield regulars from the 1940 team.

As it is, the Vixs finished in a three-way tie for the No-Name title with Albany and Corvallis, and their only real black mark is the loss to Corvallis. That one should never have occurred, but a combination of circumstances — including a sloppy field and the absence of Bud Coons, regular fullback, from the lineup — led to their loss.

Only once in the four-year history of the No-Name league has a team earned clear-cut claim to the championship. Milwaukee, in 1938, earned the title with a sweep of the league, but in 1939 the Maroons tied with Eugene and in 1940 Albany tied with Salem. However, this year is the first in which the leaders have suffered a loss. In 1939 Milwaukee and Eugene won all other games but tied each other 13-13. While last season Salem and Eugene won all other games but tied each other 0-0.

Where to, Now?

Overlooked in Willamette's easy walk to the Northwest conference championship was the fact that the Bearcats whipped their last three circuit opponents in a space of 13 days. P.S.—They no doubt could have done the same job in three days. Be that as it may, the 'Cats rolled up 123 points to seven scored against them from November 7 to November 20, inclusively, in beating CPS 55-7, Pacific 40-0 and Whitman 28-0.

Now what? ... That is the question which confronts Willamette on the football front. The keen machine that Spec Keene has built is much too good for the Northwest conference, as that conference now stands, yet support for any larger program is not in sight. Even if such financial support was in sight, facilities Willamette now has available are inadequate to handle it.

So, where to? ... Preserve the status quo by staying in the Northwest conference, beating the daylight out of conference brethren and picking up enough games with higher calibre opponents to keep up sufficient interest to balance the football budget? ... Or jump out of the Northwest conference into something higher, build a decent stadium and hope that the jump and the finer facilities will gain sufficient support to maintain the new program? ... Anybody any ideas?

Fight to Draw

WORCESTER, Mass., Nov. 21.—(P)—Waddell Washington, 159-pound negro from Springfield, Friday night fought a ten-round draw with Harvey Massey, 159, from New Orleans.

Oliver, Minus Two Regulars, Gloomy Over Ducks' Chances

By GAIL FOWLER

SEATTLE, Nov. 21.—(P)—One of the closest inter-school feuds in Pacific Coast conference football rivalry resumes Saturday when the big University of Oregon eleven invades Seattle for its annual game with the University of Washington Huskies. Since their first game in 1900, Washington has won 16, Oregon 14, and four games ended in ties. Since Coach Jimmy Phelan came to Washington in 1930, the teams have won five apiece and tied the other.

Fordham Rams Await Gaels

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—(P)—Well rested after last week's vacant date and still hopeful of receiving a Bowl bid, the Fordham Rams will be in a determined frame of mind when they tackle the St. Mary's Gaels in their annual struggle Saturday at the polo grounds.

Despite their unexpected loss to Pittsburgh a fortnight ago, the Rams still rank with the most powerful outfits in the east and will enter the game favorites.

No Question About It! Baseball's '42 Rookie Crop Is Bound to be Best Ever

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—(Special to The Statesman)—Some gloomy day Bill Brandt will announce that the National league rookie crop is not quite up to par and then we will know the world is upside down.

That day has not arrived, and it seems a long way off, as Mr. Brandt still is proceeding stoutly along the same old lines. From his cheerful office high up in Rockefeller Center he enthuses flatteringly, and with no more enthusiasm than a kid with a new bike, that the 1942 rookie crop is "the best ever."

Coming from such an unprejudiced source such a statement carries weight. About 180

The Huskies rate as slight favorites over their slightly bulkier opponents in what should be another terrific battle in the series.

Washington still nurses slim Rose Bowl hopes, but needs victory over Oregon and USC, to retain its claims. Oregon, by beating Washington and Oregon State, and provided Stanford should lose to California, could throw the race into a five-way tie, with Washington State's giant killers and Oregon State also flurrying.

The Webfoots arrived by train Friday morning and Coach Gerald "Tex" Oliver planned a workout on the Washington stadium turf in the afternoon.

Tex said Elliott Wilson, big center, and Bill Regner, regular veteran end, would not play, although both accompanied the squad. They've been nursing injuries. Frank Boyd, halfback reputedly a better punter than the Coast conference's leader, Oregon's own Curly Mecham, didn't make the trip. He was banged up in the Santa Clara game.

Tex gloomily predicted his squad would be "lucky to hold Washington to three touchdowns," and please pass the salt. On the Washington side of the ledger, thirteen Husky seniors, who haven't lost to Oregon yet, got together and made a solemn vow to wind up their collegiate careers with an unblemished record against the Webfoots. The Huskies won here two years ago, 20-13, and again at Portland last year 10-0.

Only Washington cripple was Earl Younglove, the veteran end still ailing from a leg injury received in the California tilt. It was considered likely he'd be in the game sooner or later, however.

No Title Game For Bobcats

MYRTLE POINT, Nov. 21.—(P)—The Myrtle Point Bobcats, one of Oregon's two undefeated teams, will not compete in a post-season game for the mythical state championship, Coach E. L. "Pat" Rickard said Friday.

The Myrtle Point team finished its regular schedule Nov. 11, and challenged The Dalles, also unbeaten, to a titular game. The Dalles had no open date on its schedule until Dec. 5, and Coach Rickard said he could not keep his team in practice until then.

Pilots Bring Lutes' Skein To End, 20-6

By GAIL FOWLER
TACOMA, Wash., Nov. 21.—(P)—The Pacific Lutheran gladiators, outpaced, outlateral and out-dazzled, saw their string of 18 consecutive football victories abruptly and convincingly snapped Friday night by the Portland university Pilots.

The score was 20 to 6, and it was the first time since 1939 the Lutes had been beaten, and the first time since 1938 that they'd lost on their home field.

The Portlanders, who finally struck their stride with a 37-0 victory over Gonzaga last week after a dismal season, took the play away from the Lutherans in the third quarter to score two touchdowns and write their upset into the books.

The first half ended with the score 6 to 6, and with the Lutes on the Portland one-yard line after an 81-yard drive. It was the last time the Lutes threatened.

Intercepted passes paved the way for the winning scores. Early in the third period Marvin "Tommygun" Tommervik, who was virtually all his team's offense, pitched a forward into the tummy of Del Hunsinger, Portland fullback from Bellingham, Wash., and Hunsinger returned it 10 yards to the Lute 32.

Jeff Ends Season With Five of Six

JEFFERSON—Coach Pat Beal's Jefferson high six-man football team rolled over Rickreall 52 to 21 here Wednesday to close its initial six-man season with five victories in six games. The Jeffs totaled 202 points to opponents' 77 in their first year of football.

lads with their feet on the ground." That sounded a little like they were a bunch of Zeke Bonuras, whose feet always were on the ground, in one spot, but he didn't mean it just that way.

Almost without stopping to catch his breath, Mr. Brandt reeled off the facts and figures on a platoon of the prospective wampus babies of baseball.

At the top of the list he put Stan Musial, called up last season after duty with Springfield, Mo., and Rochester. The led can pitch or play the outfield with what the enthusiastic Mr. Brandt calls equal dexterity.

"And here's a funny one," Mr. Brandt added as an after-though. "On the questionnaire I have a place for the boys to list their hobbies. Stan just put down: 'I don't have time for hobbies with a baby around the house.' I tell you, we have some great young fellows coming up. Just wait until you see our green book."

Yardstick Gets Gander at All Bowl Prospects

SEATTLE, Nov. 21 (AP) How about the bowl team prospects? What have they done on the grid-iron yardstick? Well, let's have a look.

American football statistical bureau compilations released today show the following:

Arizona, certain to be the Border conference representative in the Sun Bowl at El Paso, ranks first in the nation in total offense and in forward passing offense. The Arizonans, dynamite in their own conference, but defeated twice in inter-sectional battle, rolled up 373.5 yards average per game via rushes and passes, and 184.3 yards per game by strictly aerial activity.

Missouri, undefeated since its opening loss to Ohio State, is well in front as the leading rushing offensive team, with a 290.3 yard average per game. The Missourians switched their offensive emphasis with the graduation of pitching Paul Christman, and have been using Bob Steuber and Maurice Wade as their ground gaining siege guns.

Duquesne, undefeated in eight games, looms as the nation's defensive leader, allowing the foe but 111.9 yards per game via rushes and passes. The Dukes rank third in rushing defense with a 56 yard yield, and fifth in forward passing defense with 54.6.

The Duke Blue Devils are the country's second most potent total offensive unit, with a 353.4 yard average per game. The Blue Devils are fifth as rushers with 250 yards per game averaged on the ground.

The Texas Aggies, winners in 28 of their last 29 starts, and for two years the nation's top total defensive team, rank third in that respect this season, holding the enemy to 123 yards per game. The Aggies are second in defense against rushing, with a 54.1 average.

Offensively, they're second, and technically first, in forward passing offense. They've chucked the ball the extraordinarily high number of 225 times and have completed 99 for 1354 yards, or a 169.3 yard average. They've had 23 interceptions. Arizona nominally ranks first, but hasn't faced the caliber of competition which the Aggies had to surmount aerially.

Actor Pat O'Brien, recipient of the award last year, lauded Brown's activities in the world of sports at a luncheon tendered by the foundation.

The comedian said he had seen 38 world baseball series, innumerable major prize fights, turf attractions and football games. He holds an honorary letter presented by a UCLA football team — the first one ever given an outsider.

PORTLAND, Nov. 21.—(Special)—The championship Willamette Bearcats collected 11 places on the 13-man all-Northwest conference football squad named here Friday by conference members, and were accorded two berths on the 12-man second aggregation.

The Bearcats, who allowed but seven points scored against them in sweeping conference opponents, polled both end positions, Bill Reder and Marshall Barbour; three tackles, Martin Barstad, George Constable and Neil Morley; both guards, Tony Fraiola and Gordon Moore; and four backfield members, Gene Stewart, Buddy Reynolds, Teddy Ogdahl and Al Walden.

Unanimous choices were Reder, Barstad, Fraiola and Ogdahl. For Walden, it was the third straight year on the all-conference.

Pat White, second-year pivot of the 'Cats, nailed down the second team center slot after a close race with Pacific's Anderson, while Chuck Furno made a halfback spot.

George Constable and Neil Morley tied in votes for the second tackle position on the all-star, and both were so recognized.

It was also the second straight year that Tony Fraiola, but a sophomore, has been elevated to the mythical selection.

Feller's Mom Writes Board

CLEVELAND, Nov. 21.—(P)—Mrs. William Feller, mother of the ace of the Cleveland Indian pitching staff, Robert Feller, has written a letter to her son's selective service board which may affect his 1-A draft classification.

John A. Morley, chairman of the board with which Feller registered, Friday night said he could not speak for the board but expressed doubt that the situation warranted new action.

Bob, at his home in Van Meter, Iowa, said the letter in no way was a plea for deferment but contained information not included in the questionnaire on file concerning the physical condition of his father, William, and the financial support he gives his family, which also includes a 'teen age sister.

Joe Petroski's successful placement game Miami the winning margin in a game dominated by South Carolina except for a brief spell in the second period.

The result gave Miami seven victories in eight games this season, and it was the first time the Hurricanes have blown over the Gamecocks in their five meetings.

The defeat was Carolina's third.
