The French Ship Normandie Changing to Lafayette

Workers are removing the name Normandie from the giant liner at her New York pier as the ship is refitted for war work. Seized from the French, the ship will be re-named the Lafayette, becoming the world's largest naval auxiliary.

Prepared to Spot Air Invader

As part of the precautionary measures taken along the eastern U. S. seaboard, the army has placed several direction and height finder crews of anti-aircraft batteries at key points. The unit's job is to spot and gauge the height of enemy planes that might attempt a raid on coastal cities.

US Troop Transport Launched

The 17,600-ton army transport James O'Hara slides down the ways at Tacoma, Washington, another addition to America's fast-growing fleet of ships. West Coast shipyards are working at top speed building the vessels sorely needed in America's war in the Pacific.
