With Salem Folk at OSC

By ILENE PAULSON

Salem is well represented in the Junior Prom queen contest this year as two of the twenty-two candidates are from Salem. These two popular coeds are Frances Anne Mott and Jean Read. Boys of the junior class will vote on candidates the latter part of this week and the top five will be announced. Until the Prom, January 31, no one will know which of the lucky five will become queen of the largest dance of winter term.

Intellectually minded are Doris Harrington and David Van Cleave, both award winners of Phi Kappa Phi, the senior scholastic honorary. Helping direct the activities is Eileen Holden, on the Award Forum council.

Ruth Brandeberry, co-editor of the Barometer's women's page, has accepted a job in Salem and so will not return to the campus this term. She, however, will still be co-editor and will come to Corvallis as often as possible to assist in putting out the weekly page.

Two new fraternity pledges are Don Harrick and Robert Lamkin. Don is wearing a Delta Tau Delta pledge pin whereas a Theta Xi one is on Robert's lapel.

Bright spots on the campus last Monday were Genevieve Winslow and Ruth Anunson. Genevieve, in a striking pink raincoat, was seen strolling in front of the library. Discussing a problem with her food's teacher was Ruth, who was wearing a beautiful light blue coat.

Finding a girl to take home from the dance was the quest of most of the boys at the Freshman dance last Friday night. The students went to the dance without dates, but could not go home without dates unless they wanted to serenade the girls' living groups.

Rosemary Bell and Mabelle Frasier visited Oregon State Saturday night from Salem to attend the annual Engineers' ball. Also dancing among the machines and devices in the engineering laboratory were Helen Smith, Elizabeth Anne Herrick, Kirk Bell, Don Briggs, Harold Nelson and Norman Sholseth. Finding more interest in Salem were Charlotte Best, Frances Anne Mott and Bob Reinholdt, who spent part of last weekend at home.

The latest rumor about there being no spring vacation this year has caused much discussion on the campus. With no vacation, school would be out in May and make possible the starting of school on a twelve months basis to aid in national defense. Students are anxiously awaiting the meeting of the state board of higher education next Monday when the question will be settled.

Shoulder your way through the yard goods department in one of Salem's stores and you'll see what women are doing to cut down the high cost of dressing well.

Materials, especially rayons and wools, have never been more intriguing to the woman who can sew for manufacturers have worked hard to excel all previous fabrics.

Rayons have the feel of real silk, the kind we used to love to run our hands through as it cascaded over the edge of the bolt. Gone indeed is the wiryness of rayon we saw in the past. Some simulate linen, with an unevenness quality lacking in the real thing. Colors are reminiscent of the Pan American hues. Large sprawling patterns of white appear on various shades of blue or green. A background of aqua takes a bold pattern of white and wine. Rose mist, boasts flowers of white and turquoise. White and wine patterns splash across a background of field green.

Woolens too have an air of their own this year. Sheer fabrics appear in the most exquisite plaids in rose, pale green and blue. They'll soon be appearing as smart skirts, dresses and suits.

Many a sewing machine will be pulled from the bedroom closet, or brought out of an obscure corner, to be oiled, threaded in bright hues and set to work as part of the all-out program of saving every cent for bigger things.
