Comfortable Shoes Essential for War Work

Left, flag blue calfskin exford; center, crushed leather exford; right, motor corp exford

If you have volunteered for any of the patriotic services, you'll find it very important to have comfortable feet. There is now a complete war-time shoe wardrobe, three of the models from which are shown above. At the left is an AWVS shoe in smooth flag blue calfskin. It is an ankle-fitting oxe ford that harmonises with all the uniforms designed for the distaff side of the Civilian Defense army. It is welt-made, with an inner and outer sole for greater comfort and protection. Center, the young air raid warden is wearing a crushed leather oxford for comfort during hours of patrol duty. It has only three eyelets to facilitate dressing in a hurry, extra breadth across the ball of the foot, and snugly fitting heels. The shoe, right, is for work in the motor corps and all automobile driving. It is a sturdy oxford with a ventilated vamp made of crushed calfskin with an extra eyelet at the ankle for a super-snug fit. These shoes were designed by Julius Grossman, noted shoe designer.
