McNutt and Mandic, Zone Defense Stops Giant Stanford Five

Series Tied, Necessitating Final Game Monday; Beavers Drive in Second Half to Win Going Away

PALO ALTO, Calif., March 14—(AP)—Oregon State college beat Stanford, 42 to 33, Saturday night to even the games at one apiece in their current play-off for the Pacific Coast conference basketball championship.

Stanford won Friday night's game, the first of the play-off, by a score of 41-28. Oregon State's win will necessitate the third game of the series, which will be played here Monday night.

The first half of the game ran nip and tuck with the score being tied eight times. It was a standstill at half-time, 18 to 18.

The Beavers jumped into the lead at the start of the second half with two fast baskets by Substitute Forward George McNutt, who got into the game Friday night as a sub and did as well that Oregon State started him Saturday night.

From then on, the Beavers were always in front. The Indians never threatened the Beavers' lead by more than four points at any time thereafter.

McNutt took the high-scoring honors for the evening with 14 points. Close behind was John Mandic, OSC center, who made 13.

Stanford's high scorer was Jack Dana, forward, who dropped in a total of 11 points. Dana is a substitute who replaced co-captain Don Burness in the starting lineup.

Oregon State switched its defense from the man-for-man, to a zone setup. As a result, the Indians got few clear shots and almost no follow shots.

Mandic was especially effective defensively against the follow-up shots, and made some nice pivot shots to spur the OSC attack.

The Beavers' offense was a slow, deliberate type with a few long shots mixed in by Paul Valenti, guard, who made three long ones that pulled the Stanford defense out of line. This loosened up the tight Indian defense and the Beavers came in and started shooting under the basket.

A crowd of 2,900, 100 short of the capacity of the Stanford pavilion, saw the game.

Sprague Outlines Plan to Save Home Fuel for Coming Winter

Saving of the waste of sawdust, slabwood and wood shavings so that such materials may be used by the people of Oregon next winter as home fuel was outlined in a plan launched by Gov. Charles A. Sprague here Saturday.

H. J. Cox, Eugene, president of the Willamette Valley Lumber association, and Arthur Praul, public relations director relations director for the same concern, were named by Gov. Sprague to confer with mill operators and wood dealers and request adoption of a plan that will assist in averting a fuel shortage next winter.

"I am asking the mills of this state to save and accumulate sawdust and slabwood throughout the spring and summer," Gov. Sprague said. "The mill operators also will be urged to arrange for distribution of this large supply of fuel through dealers to the ultimate consumers."

"If this suggestion is followed our normal supply of fuel, which I believe will be heavily curtailed next winter, can be greatly supplemented through the saving of sawmill waste."

"Householders in Oregon may have to go back to the old days and pile slabwood in their parking," Gov. Sprague declared.
