Women Save Waste in Attic

The slogan for the English people, "Dig for Victory," was changed recently to "Dig for Dear Life," and it means to dig other places than merely in the garden. Digging down into the darkest closet will often yield a lot of material with which a woman can help in the war.

All cannot be air raid wardens, but any woman can become an efficient and much needed waste warden. There is fun in seeking out discarded clothing or shoes from the attic to put back into working order. We proved some time ago that we could take a deep cut in the budget in our stride, and now we are telling the world about how gladly we'll carry home groceries, ride a bicycle and shave a little more of the sugar budget.

But back to the immediate business of saving waste. Most attics will yield a dozen chances for rehabilitation of clothing or household utensils. For instance, rubber tire patching kits come in mighty handy for patching a torn raincoat, a leaky hot water bottle or a pair of galoshes. If the rubber is soft and flexible, it's probably worth saving. Use the cement from the tire kit to stick on a patch made from a pocket or taken from under a hem. Use the regular patches on the hot water bottle or galoshes. Wool garments found in the attic may easily take on a new form. Ravel wool from worn out knitted garments, wind on the back of a chair and tie securely. Wash as for any wool material and the yarn is ready to knit again into sweaters. Even tag ends will go into afghans.

SUVER—Mrs. W. J. Kerr and daughter, Mrs. Don Hanery of Salem, entertained with a bridal shower for Mrs. Douglas Dodele (Marian Kester), Friday. The many gifts were opened by the bride's mother, Mrs. Wesley Kester as the honor guest is in California.
