Registration For Rationing On Thursday

The second stamp in sugar ration books became "legal tender" Monday and continues to be usable to and through May 30, members of the Salem district rationing board emphasized Monday as they laid plans for the reopening of sugar rationing registration here Thursday.

Persons who did not register during the earlier registration period will be expected to do so, not only to secure sugar but so that the lists thus secured may be used for possible rationing of other foodstuffs during the wartime emergency, it was said. The office in Salem, in the Ladd & Bush bank building, opens at 10 a. m. closes at 5:30 p. m. No registrations are to be received there before Thursday.

Totals of war ration books issued to date were announced Monday from the office of Mrs. Florence Bell, in charge of sugar ration records. In Salem, 28,814 of the 40,000 to 45,000 books anticipated were issued; Woodburn, 6068; Stayton, 6891; and Silverton, 6318.

Indian Show Begins at Chemawa

Tribesmen and their families from the entire northwest will gather at the Chemawa Indian school today to witness the fifth annual pageant of the lives of Indians on the Pacific coast, which will be presented tonight and Wednesday night, at 8:30 o'clock. It will be preceded by Indian dancing each night at 7:30.

An Indian exhibit will be on display also and will feature tanned buckskins, beaded work, rare waterproof blankets, an art almost extinct, and head dresses.

This performance will be the culmination of a year's study and preparation. All rooms cooperated in the composition of the story, each contributing outstanding features of their reservation life.

The story deals with the wanderings of Kemhism, who receives a vision from the Great Spirit and sets out to find it. In his travels he visits all of the different Indian tribes, including the Quinaltids, Tulalips, Yakimas, Colvilles, Nez Perce, Umatillas, Blackfeet, Crow, Sioux and Shoshones.

Between acts, music will be presented by the glee club, a mixed chorus of students and several specialty numbers, some of which will be in native tongue, some modern arrangements, and some interpretive sign language.

Fire District Is Continued For Approval

Formation of the Aumsville rural fire protection district, pending for a year, may be approved at a meeting of the county court Friday morning, it was indicated at an extended hearing before the court Monday. The matter was continued to give the district attorney and George R. Duncan, attorney for the district's backers, time to iron out boundary line questions.

Fire District Is Continued For Approval

Formation of the Aumsville rural fire protection district, pending for a year, may be approved at a meeting of the county court Friday morning, it was indicated at an extended hearing before the court Monday. The matter was continued to give the district attorney and George R. Duncan, attorney for the district's backers, time to iron out boundary line questions.

Principal question raised Monday was how to change the boundaries of the proposed district to meet the objections of 25 property owners who prefer to be included in a district being formed around Stayton. County Judge Grant Murphy said that in the absence of formal remonstrances no election probably would be required to create the Aumsville protection district but, he said, an election will have to be called to name five directors.

The proposed Aumsville district covers an area approximately four miles wide and six miles long, bounded on the south by the river and on the north by a line slightly north of Shaw. Aumsville, West Stayton and Shaw lie in approximately the middle of the district, taken from the longer dimension.

Hospital Plan For Disaster Is Explained

Salem's hospitals are prepared for emergencies such as invasion, enemy bombing in this vicinity or a sabotage-caused disaster, Chaplain I. I. Friesen of the Salem Deaconess hospital declared in a National Hospital week address at the Salem chamber of commerce Monday noon. A division of territory from which each hospital would receive patients has been made, transportation arranged and arrangements made for evacuation, if need arises, of those patients who can be moved if space demand requires, he explained. Blackout provision has been made and drills held, he added.

Public appreciation of hospitals as community health assets, and of their financial problems, has been increasing in recent years, Mr. Friesen asserted. Pointing out that hospital charges provide no profit, even leaving out of consideration the great volume of charity work done, he discussed several solutions of the general financial problem and put favorable emphasis on the group hospitalization plan which provides hospitals a steady income while assuring patrons of hospital service when they need it without additional cost.

W. H. Crawford, executive secretary of the Oregon Economic council, outlined some features of the rubber supply situation which point to the necessity for "temporary regimentation in the American way" in order that essential civilian services may be carried on and military victory achieved.

New Setup For Rationing Considered

Partial reorganization of the rationing board setup in Oregon, with a view of expediting operations and eliminating confusion, was considered at a meeting here Monday attended by Gov. Charles A. Sprague, Richard Montgomery, state director of the office of price administration, and other officials.

Gasoline rationing particularly was discussed at the session. It was indicated that a number of rationing boards would be abolished but there will be at least one board in each county under the proposed new setup.

It was not decided definitely whether gasoline rationing cards will be issued by school officials, due to the fact that a large number of Oregon schools will be closed prior to May 28. The sugar rationing registration was handled by school officials, assisted by volunteer workers.

The suggestion was made that in event school officials are not able to issue gasoline rationing cards that this work be turned over to the county civilian defense councils.

Montgomery said he did not anticipate any serious difficulty in issuing gasoline rationing cards provided some responsible statewide organization would take over the registration work. Card rationing of gasoline in Oregon and Washington becomes effective June 1.
