WASHINGTON, May 19-(AP) The intrepid American airmen who staged the historic raid on Japan April 18 unloaded bombs within plain sight of Emperor Hirohito's palace, cut a swathe of destruction 40 miles long and five to 20 miles wide, and departed without losing a single plane.

This was revealed Tuesday night by their leader, Brig. Gen. James H. Doolittle, "Jimmy" Doolittle, the famous speed record flier of the days of peace. President Roosevelt pinned a congressional medal of honor to his tunic at the White House and after that ceremony, numerous details of the attack were disclosed

None of the planes was damaged enough to prevent its safe arrival at its destination, or takeoff point and did not discuss the Russian announcement shortly after the raid that an American plane had landed in Russian territory and been interned.

Direct hits left a nearly completed cruiser or battleship near Tokyo in flames. The Mitsubishi aircraft factory at Nagoya was strewn with incendiary bombs. Industrial concentrations, shipyards, docks, fuel stores, collections of fuel tanks, ammunition dumps at Yokesuke, Kenagawa, Kobe and Osaka, all felt the destructive effect of explosives made in Ameri-

A squadron of B-25 medium bombers was specially equipped for the attack. Crews who had volunteered for a "hazardous, important and interesting" mission, without knowing Japan was the objective, manned them. They trained especially for the mission for weeks even before leaving the Salem Men United States.

"They were the finest group of officers with which I ever had the good fortune to be associated, and that goes for the enlisted men, too," said Doolittle, who was unstinting in his praise for the courage, efficiency and accuracy.

When the time came, the planes swept in upon Japan at "house-top" height. This made them difficult targets for antiaircraft guns, but exposed them to any machine gun fire that might lie along the line of flight. Each plane had an assigned target for its stick of four bombs. Approaching the objectives, the planes climbed to 1500 feet, the minimum altitude at which they Joseph Dodd, Portland, national were safe from the effect of their director. own bombs. As soon as the bombs were released they dropped again cluded: to a level just above the tree tops. Amazing little opposition was encountered. A few pursuit ships
