Business and Professional Club to Hear Col. Des Islets Speak

Members of the Salem Business and Professional Women's club and guests are planning a dinner meeting Tuesday for which the main speaker will be Lt. Col. R. E. Des Islets, commander at Camp Adair. Prior to his present assignment, Lt. Col. Des Islets was responsible head of construction and operation of the physical features of Bonneville dam.

The military head of Camp Adair is busy and it is a big surprise to those close to him that he is able to handle the mass of detail which goes daily through his office. He has time to smile, tell a good story, or listen equally well, but is also able to be "the hard-boiled colonel" of army tradition.

Upon graduation from West Point in 1926 he immediately went into a building job for the army. He was assigned to Fort Bliss after a period with troops on the Mexican border and laid out the new post. On the side, he assisted in counter espionage along the Mexican border, and it was through the efforts of him and his associates that a revolution was avoided. They predicted within two hours the time planned for the beginning of the revolution, thus making it possible to frustrate these plans without interference of US troops and forestalling diplomatic concussions on both sides of the border.

He then attended the engineering technical school at Ft. Belvoir, Va. Upon graduation, Lt. Col. Des Islets went to Hawaii on an assignment which included some engineering in reorganization of defense layouts. Upon returning from the Islands, the colonel was assigned as an instructor of ROTC cadets at Auburn university, Ala., where he imparted military engineering to men who are now fellow officers on active duty. Although his job there was military engineering, Lt. Col. Des Islets saw even more in the responsibility of character building in the young men of the south and now recites many pleasant memories of the development of these cadets from college freshmen to officers in the army.

Ability of the Camp Adair commandant was recognized by the war department following the Auburn assignment, when he was ordered to attend the commanding general's staff school, the height of army recognition and the goal of all career officers in the army. The school is at Ft. Leavenworth, Kas., and technique of administration, tactics and handling of troops - up to 125,000 on one mission is included in the course. Completion of this school is necessary to the higher ranks in the army. Col. Des Islets has had interest in athletics in the past and has an impressive sports record of his own. Besides football and track at West Point, he went to Paris and Amsterdam in 1924 and 1928 as a high hurdler in the Olympic team representing his country. He coached army athletics on the side on many of his assignments and, only the last year, led his league as a hitter in soft ball with his Bonneville team. Mrs. Des Islets will accompany Col. Des Islets to Salem Tuesday night.
