But the best game pitched wasn't won by the Bearcats. Earl Toolson, other member of the "Big Three," had more stuff than he's ever had before in holding the Whits to two hits in the third game, but a scoring draught eaught up with his mates and Earl was beaten 2-1.

Odd how these Methodists come through in the title games-two years ago they went up to Whitman with a club somewhat similar to this year's champs—not much hitting, just fair afield and Zivic Slashes glaringly weak otherwise in spots. But they came home with the title that year, too.

Then last season the Keenemen came up with a pretty fair club, went to Walla Walla as favorites and came home soundly Lew Jenkins whacked.

But back they went this time as underdogs, and home they came with the crown-just a "money" ball club that plays its best when the club chips are in the middle.

Remedy-More Work

Saw our Roy Helser do a relief turn for the Portland Bevos Sunday against the truly potent Los Angeles Angels, but big Roy didn't look like the same left handed terror who tore through the WIL during the past two years. Helser had his stuff all right, but the bugaboo that's kept him out of AA ball was still with him Sundayfaulty control. The rugged Angels got only one run off Helser in the four heats he worked, but he was in trouble every inning, behind most of the batters and dished up in all a total of seven passes.

Roy's wildness is the only thing that's going to keep him from making good with the Bevos, and making good with the Bevos, and most pitchers, particularly leftsemblance of a turn if they are to maintain the necessary and allimportant control.

Helser's Sunday tenure was the first time in a week he got to see action, and even before the game he was running around the outfield and throwing batting practice—things a pitcher just doesn't do on the day he's supposed to work, that is, if he's told before hand that he may be "in there."

Savold Slaps Lou Nova Into Submission

WASHINGTON, May 25 -(AP) scoring a technical knockout over California's Lou Nova in the Referee Charles Reynolds stopped the bout after eight rounds when Nova was bleeding badly though Nova had bled since the second round, it wasn't until the fifth that he showed signs of weakening.

Nova protested violently when the verdict was awarded to Savold, claiming he was able to continue. His left eyes was examined after the eighth, however, and Reynolds ruled he would risk permanent injury by continuing the bout.

The California ex-Yogi man carried the bout to Savold with a furious assault in the opening frame, and continued to hold the advantage in the third, fourth and fifth largely because of superior boxing skill.

Savold, who needed this victory to gain a probable shot at Champion Joe Louis' crown, kept boring in - even when Nova had the upper hand at the infighting - and absorbed plenty of punishment before his straight rights to the face and hard lefts to the body sent Nova to the ropes repeatedly late in the fight.

The first match play handicap tournament to be staged at the Salem Golf club in more than a decade will open Saturday with elimination rounds continuing on successive weekends for about four weeks, it was announced Monday. Players with established handicaps will be entered. Pairings will be announced Friday.

The Thursday "twilight" feature this week will be another team match between the teams captained by Millard Pekar and John Heltzel which played a close match several weeks ago. Additional players will be assigned to each team.
