From the BLEACHERS By AL LIGHTNER

Lovely weather for baseball we're having, isn't is? A communique from 25th and Turner road area states that a submarine was trapped in the first-base coaching box the other day and a fleet of chasers attacked and sank her on the spot.

And now's a good time for Willamette to take up crew practice-the ball park would be an ideal spot. They wouldn't lack a coach either, as Lt. 'ansome 'arold Hauk is now qualified to lead a marine team. Incidentally, have you seen Lt. Hauk in

Good Old Suspended List

All this hullabaloo being raised about both Portland's Bevos and Seattle's Rainiers working the "angles" of the good old baseball suspended list isn't at all new to Western International league clubs. As long as the WI has been in operation advantage of the "situation," so to speak, has been taken, although teeth were bridged into the loopholed rule just last season.

If a player is placed on the suspended list in this league now, another must be released when suspended player is brought back to active duty. Before, it was just a matter of exchanging player for player, and vice versa. The suspended player or players travelled with the team and worked out before games, but when the game started had to remove his suit and get up in the stands. And more than once during the course of a game said player was called from the stands to don the suit and enter the game, changing places with some other member of the club.

Seven days was the minimum time alloted anyone on the list, truly a ball club's protection which, as we look at it, is a very favorable way to maintain players who would otherwise be forced loose by release. It's particularly favorable during times like these, as you never know when one or more of your key men will be grabbed up by the military, leaving you with the bat boy to drive in the runs.

Player Must Be 'Injured'

Of course the suspended list was originated with the idea that it should be used for injured players. Their respective pay goes on just the same as if they were playing every day. And should a player come up with a sore finger, or feet, or a kink in the back-things that are always wrong with every player at one time er another during a season-he is rightfully eligible for the suspended list, much to the joy of the club owner or manager who is always seeking ways and means of bettering the club, but afraid to turn loose a player or two. Taking advantage of the situation is only natural for any ball club in war times now, as it's tough enough to find and maintain a team that will take up the slack left by the draft and better paying war in-

Salem threatened often enough, but three swift double plays by the Caps cut the rallies short and pulled Henricsen out of what few jams he got into.

The two clubs will continue with their series in Vancouver Friday night and will play a double header Saturday. Those dates were originally slated for the Salem park, but were transferred to Vancouver.
