New vocational NYA classes are being organized now at Chemawa under direction of Fred Lewis, who is taking the place of R. R. "Bob" Boardman there.

The classes will include aviation sheet metal, general sheet metal and electric welding. Twenty two were placed in jobs during May following completion of these classes, according to C. A. Guderian, coordinator of defense training in the Salem district.

The time required for the different courses varies, depending upon the work. The aviation sheet metal class requires 180 hours of training and the Columbia Aircraft will take those who complete the course at 55 cents an hour to start. The electric welding class depends upon the individual and when the student can pass the ship yard test he is eligible for $1.12 an hour.

The general sheet metal class work depends upon the work and ranges from six to 12 weeks with wages being 90 cents an hour or better.

The Chemawa classes are open to all persons interested who can qualify for training. Registrations should be made through the US employment office. The instruction includes board and room and a certain amount of other expense money.

60 Expected to Take Bar Exams

Approximately 60 persons will write in the annual state bar examinations to be held here June 22 and 23, Arthur S. Benson, clerk of the state supreme court, announced Monday.

More than 100 persons wrote in the examinations a year ago, conducted by the state board of bar examiners.

Nearby, the home of Miss Leota Crossan was entered sometime after her departure Friday night and before her return Sunday, with the only noted loss some cottage cheese taken from the refrigerator and eaten on the scene, although the house showed evidence of systematic search.

Eighty pints of jam and 150 quarts of other canned fruits were taken from his home at 915 South 22nd street, E. K. Stewart told police. Other articles also were taken while the family was at the beach.

A dark blue auto robe was stolen from his car as it stood parked in the garage at his residence, 775 North Cottage street, according to Victor A. Sather.

Heaviest losses listed were those of the Safeway store on State street near 14th where entry was allegedly made through a hole cut in the roof after that part of the building had been reached by a ladder. Missing were 25 cartons of cigarettes, several hundred candy bars, packaged nuts, 50 cents from a cash register, six hams, an unknown quantity of cold meats and bananas.

Mrs. Charles Pickett, 1520 South Commercial street, told police two rings valued at $40 had been taken from her home Saturday night, the thief probably entering through an unlocked basement door.

Road Trouble Gets Action

The county court appeared headed toward a showdown Monday as to what is to be done toward keeping the Elkhorn road above Mehama in passable condition.

The question was raised again when a petition signed by R. O. Adams and 57 others was received asking for improvement of the road. Another slide occurred near the Elkhorn district Friday night, blocking movement of several residents of the area, the court was advised.

Slides have occurred frequently at the same spot, site of a relocation effected over private property about six months ago at the request of large hauling operators, Judge Grant Murphy recalled. He said the whole court would visit the scene soon and the road department would investigate at once.
