Steinbeck's 'Tortilla Flat' Stars Tracy, Lamarr, Garfield

John Steinbeck's best-selling novel, "Tortilla Flat," emerges from the printed page into visual being on the screen at the Elsinore theatre, where the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture opens today.

With Spencer Tracy, Hedy Lamarr and John Garfield co-starring, this charming narrative of the California paisa is a revealing romance, with drama and comedy cunningly interlaced in the action. Victor Fleming was the director.

The supporting cast includes Frank Morgan, Akim Tamiroff, Sheldon Leonard, John Qualen, Donald Meek, Connie Gilchrist, Allen Jenkins and Henry O'Neill. Each of them portrays with fidelity one of Steinbeck's remembered characters of "the flats."

The love between Hedy Lamarr, as the fiery, impetuous Dolores, and Garfield, as Danny, lazy, likeable and dangerous, gives these stars completely new opportunities. Spencer Tracy, as the philosophical Pilon of the story, departs from any previous role and attains new heights in his understanding delineation of an arresting character.

The picture reveals the life of Tortilla Flats as Steinbeck knew and described it. The somnolent village with its humble shacks, its flower gardens oddly contrasting with its nondescript junk heaps, is on the screen in every detail, alive and vibrant with the loves and the hates of the paisanos.

The audience at the initial showing was swept into spontaneous applause by the artistry of the cast, the effective qualities of the scenes and the dramatic action of the story. Steinbeck was acclaimed for the novel. Now that praise will be echoed across the country for the picture.

Turner, Gable Brawl in Film

'Honky Tonk' Shows Lusty Frontier Days At the Hollywood

Co-starring Lana Turner and Clark Gable, concerning the brawling, lusty frontier days, and containing some of the most pretentious sets and costumes ever employed even for use in a "period" picture, the production "Honky Tonk," playing at the Hollywood today through Wednesday, is one that audiences everywhere have given a definite stamp of approval.

"Honky Tonk" rates high for excitement, comedy, romance, and action. The star-bright supporting cast includes Frank Morgan, Marjorie Main and Chill Wills.

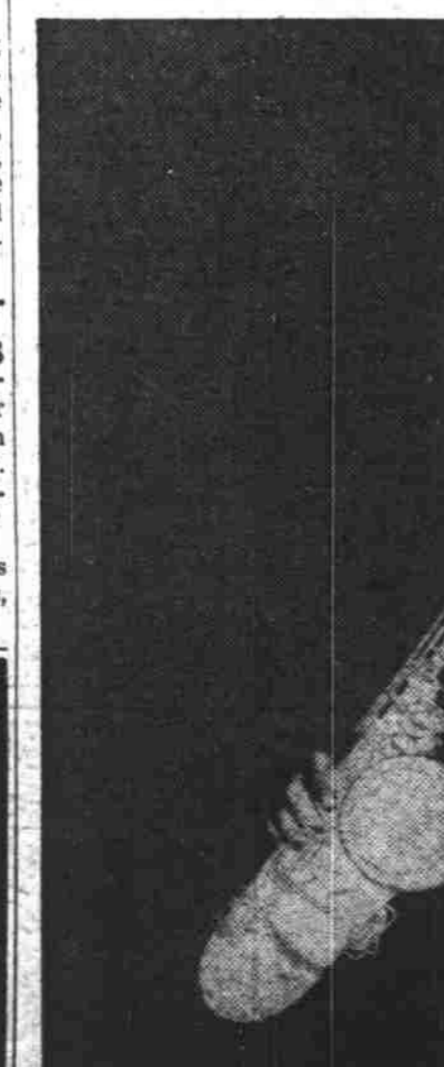

The scene in the film which will have a place all its own in your asbestos memory book, fans say, is the scene where Clark Gable breaks down Lana Turner's bedroom door after their marriage to prove that he has "decent, honorable emotions."

The second laugh hit, "Niagara Falls," stars Zasu Pitts and Slim Summerville.

JACK OAKIE SEEMS to know what he's bragging about to Betty Grable and Vic Mature in this scene from "Song of the Islands," now playing at the Capitol theatre. "All Through the Night" with Humphrey Bogart.

'All Through the Night' Is New Capitol Film Fare

"All Through the Night," which opened yesterday at the Capitol theatre, is the story of an ex-gangster who goes after the gestapo, using just about the same tactics he used against rival mobs in prohibition days. With Humphrey Bogart as the gangster, a supporting cast including Kaaren Verne, Conrad Veidt, Judith Anderson, Peter Lorre, Jane Darwell and Frank McHugh.

The tightly knit story covers a span of less than 24 hours in the lives (and in some cases, the deaths) of its characters. The opening scene cleverly sets the mood, showing the ex-gangster Bogart at lunch with some of his henchmen. The boys are playing with some toy soldiers, mapping out the kind of military strategy they think the British should use. Bogart laughs at them and tells them the war is none of their business.

Bogart is called away by an SOS from his mother. Mr. Miller, the baker who lives next door, has disappeared. Bogart discovers Miller's murdered body in the cellar, and also gets a glimpse of a lovely young stranger, played by Kaaren Verne, who seems to have some connection with the murder.

Trailing her leads him to an old warehouse and a nest of enemy agents. He manages to get the girl away from them, and from here he learns about the nefarious work of the gestapo right in New York.
